Ruthsburg Blacksmith and Wheelwright Shop

late 19th century

Ruthsburg
Private

These two simple frame buildings were at one time used as a blacksmith and wheelwright's shop. While references can be found to at least one blacksmith's shop in the Ruthsburg area as early as the late 18th century, these buildings appear to date to the latter part of the 19th century. The smithy is now abandoned and in very poor condition, with little significant evidence left for analysis. The wheelwright shop has been incorporated into the crossroads store and now serves as a storage area. Subsequent renovations have concealed or removed much of the early fabric of the building.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This blacksmith and wheelwright's shop was housed in two separate buildings located on the northwest corner of Maryland Routes 304 and 481 in the town of Ruthsburg. The wheelwright's shop has been incorporated into the Ruthsburg Store, and now serves as a storage area. The blacksmith's shop is a separate building to the rear of the store, facing east to Route 481.

All that remains of the wheelwright's shop is the basic frame, which has been reworked over the years. The first floor ceiling joists are hewn and hand sawn, while the majority of the wall framing is gang-sawn or circular-sawn. Wide vertical sheathing boards remain on the exterior of the frame but have been covered with metal and asbestos siding. A sliding barn door centered on the east gable wall was removed in recent years and replaced with a smaller door.

The blacksmith's shop is a small, rectangular one story frame structure that appears to date to the late 19th century. It is constructed of rough cedar posts resting on heavy wood sills, and is framed in with circular sawn timber and covered with vertical board siding and a corrugated tin roof. There is a wide door in the east wall and a smaller door in the west wall. A 20th century brick chimney constructed on a concrete base was located in the northeast corner, but has collapsed in recent years.
