Delsie Bounds House
Quantico
Private

1929

The Delsie Bounds house is a well-built Colonial Revival style house that stands in the village of Quantico. The two-story center hall frame dwelling features corner pilasters, a block cornice, and a Tuscan columned front porch with a barrel vault ceiling.

Dated around 1929, the two-story, three-bay structure falls into the most recent group of historic dwellings that define this rural village. With its well preserved exterior, the Bounds house provides an interesting contrast to the early-to-mid nineteenth century dwellings located to each side and across the street. A shed roofed outbuilding, probably dating to the early twentieth century as well, stands behind the house.

Commonly known as the Delsie Bounds house, the property was actually purchased by her sister, Florence, in May 1929. Apparently, the house was erected shortly thereafter, and older residents in the village recall its construction.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Delsie Bounds house stands on the east side of Main Street in the village of Quantico, Wicomico County, Maryland. The two-story, three-bay frame house faces west with the gable roof oriented on a north/south axis.

Erected in 1929, the two-story, three-bay by two-bay frame house rests on a low brick foundation, and the house is sheathed with plain weatherboards and covered with a steeply pitched asphalt shingle roof.

The west (main) elevation is a symmetrical three-bay facade with a center entrance and flanking replacement sash windows. The paneled front door, flanked by sidelights, is sheltered by a single-bay gable roofed porch supported by Tuscan columns. A barrel vault distinguishes the underside of the porch roof, and built-in seats are fitted between the house and the columns. The second floor is marked by a pair of smaller windows above the porch roof, and two large windows define the outside bays. The corners of the house are trimmed with paneled pilasters, and the eave is marked by a row of long molded cornice blocks.

The north gable end is defined by a part exterior, part interior brick chimney stack, and to each side are replacement sash windows.

On the south side of the house is a single-story glassed-in porch that carries the same eave detailing as the main block. Two replacement sash windows light the second floor and a small lunette window is fixed in the upper gable.

The house follows a center hall plan and the interior features Colonial Revival woodwork.

The only outbuilding is a small shed roofed structure with vertical board walls. A row of three six-over-six sash windows pierce the west (main) wall, and a door is located in the north side.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support. The Delsie Bounds house is a well-built Colonial Revival style house that stands in the village of Quantico. The two-story center hall frame dwelling features corner pilasters, a block cornice, and a Tuscan columned front porch with a barrel vault ceiling.

Dated around 1929, the two-story, three-bay structure falls into the most recent group of historic dwellings that define this rural village. With its well preserved exterior, the Bounds house provides an interesting contrast to the early-to-mid nineteenth century dwellings located to each side and across the street. The shed roofed outbuilding that stands behind the house, probably dating to the same period, is a modest storage shed or workshop of minimal significance.

The Delsie Bounds house is a good example of Colonial Revival style domestic architecture and therefore falls under Category B, which means that the building should be preserved, a structure exhibiting some good architectural details representing a good example of architectural development and style, and supporting the character of the district.
