Public worship

1948

Standing on the north side of the road connecting Mardela Springs and the State of Delaware near Mockingbird Pond is Snethen Methodist Church, a mid twentieth century frame structure that incorporates a traditional gable front rectangular main block and a two-story entrance tower. The 1948 construction of this building is documented along with the 1840 year of its original church on a marble datestone imbedded in the southeast corner. Colonial Revival moldings for the double door entrance and the louvered vents incorporated in the spire are common for the mid twentieth century, however the colored glass octagonal windows incorporated in the spire as well as the colored glass found in the sanctuary windows points to a reuse of older materials in the construction of this building.

E. C. Hallman, the author of a book on the origins of peninsula conference churches published in 1948 states that the "Sneathen" congregation was named after Reverend Nicholas Sneathen, one of the organizers of the Methodist Protestant church. The original 1840 church was located on the road between Riverton and Salisbury.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Snethen Methodist Church is located on the north side of Route 54 in a grove of loblolly pines just west of its intersection with Sneathen Church Road in the vicinity of Mardela Springs, Wicomico County, Maryland. The single-story frame church faces south with the gable roof oriented on a north/south axis.

Built in 1948, the single-story gable roofed frame building is supported on a brick foundation with an excavated cellar. The exterior is sheathed with vinyl siding and the steeply pitched roof is covered with asphalt shingles. Dominating the gable front main block is a two-story entrance tower. A single story early twentieth-century hall stands behind the church.

The south (main) elevation is a symmetrical facade with a two-story entrance tower topped by a short pyramidal roofed spire. The double door entrance is framed by a Colonial Revival neoclassical surround. A Wall of Troy bed molding enhances the entablature, and cross-shaped muntins distinguish a multi-pane transom. The second level of the tower is pierced by octagonal colored glass windows that are older than the 1948 construction of this church. The tower is topped by a belfry pierced by louvered openings framed by Colonial Revival surrounds. The pyramidal spire is covered with wood shingles. Fixed in the southeast corner of the brick foundation is a marble datestone inscribed, "Snethen Church, 1840-1948."

The east and west sides are largely alike with colored glass panes in the perimeter of each sash. The cellar is lighted by three-pane windows. Rising through the rear gable is an interior end brick stove chimney.

Standing behind the church is a early twentieth century single-story church hall clad with plain weatherboards and covered with a medium pitched asphalt shingle roof. The eaves are extended and the soffits are open. A small cross gable marks the entrance bay, and the gable front is covered with fishscale shingles.

The interior was not seen.
