Dr. James T. Nock House
Pocomoke City
Private

c. 1860, c. 1890

The Dr. James T. Nock house is a two-story, tee-shaped frame dwelling erected in two distinct periods. Largely dating from the late nineteenth century, this Second Street house does contain a mid nineteenth century core that may have been used for commercial purposes when the property was owned by James T. Dickinson. The Nock house is also significant as it is associated with the adjacent single story turn of the century office.

The early history of this Second Street lot is somewhat clouded, but it figures in the estate settlement of James T. Dickinson in 1867. In his will, probated in October of 1866, he bequeathed third interests in his estate to William S. Dickinson, Matilda Mills, and his grandchildren, Granville, Henry, Mary, and Annie Dickinson. Apparently the property, designated as Lot No. 4, contained some sort of improvement at the time, but its original use is not clearly stated in the deed. Apparently the Dickinson heirs rented the property afterwards to an Emma F. Ebberts since she is located on the 1877 Newtown map, but again her use for the buildings has not surfaced in written records. She acquired title to the Second Street lot in March of 1884, and she maintained ownership through the balance of nineteenth century.

The extensive remodeling of the house was probably accomplished during Emma Ebberts's ownership which lasted until December of 1907. At that time Emma F. Ebberts and her husband, Alexander, transferred the title to their property to Minnie G. Landing, who in turn sold it two years later to Alexander H. Stevens. Finally in September of 1913 James T. Nock purchased the property for $3000. Dr. Nock is remembered by older town residents as a local dentist who practiced his trade in the adjacent single-story office. Nock family interest in the property was not sold until the current owners purchased the house and office in 1982.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Dr. James T. Nock house is located at 205 Second Street in the center of Pocomoke City, Worcester County, Maryland. Facing north, the two-story, tee-shaped frame dwelling is oriented on a north/south axis.

Built in two principal stages, the earliest section, a c. 1860 two-story gable front frame structure, was extensively reworked with Victorian style additions during the late nineteenth century. Located to the west side, the mid nineteenth century structure was extended with a five-sided bay pavilion to the north, a two-story wing to the east that incorporated a new entrance, and a kitchen wing to the south. Resting on an in-filled brick pier foundation, the frame house is sheathed with plain weatherboards, and it is covered by a steeply pitched asphalt shingle gable roof. The house is accompanied on the lot by a single-story turn of the century office. (see WO-352)

The north (main) facade of the house follows an asymmetrical elevation with a recessed entrance sheltered by a turned post, hip roofed porch. Partially glazed double front doors are topped by a single pane transom. Fixed to the east of the entrance is a single two-over-two sash window. The front porch is decorated with a turned baluster handrail and a decorative spindle row under the eave. The second floor is lighted by a single two-over-two sash window. West of the entrance bay is a projecting two-story gable-front pavilion pierced by two-over-two sash windows on each floor. A smaller two-over-two sash window pierces the upper gable. Rising through the center of the house is an interior brick chimney finished with a corbelled cap. The east gable end of the house is a pedimented elevation with two-over-two sash windows lighting each floor. The west side, on the other hand

The first floor interior finishes largely date from the late nineteenth century reworking of the house. A late nineteenth century stair with a heavily turned newel post rises in the southeast corner of the hall. Molded corner block surrounds frame the various door openings. Fixed in the southwest corner of the kitchen is an enclosed stair with a narrow beaded board partition. The second floor of the west section contains a wide pine floor and a few mid nineteenth century four-panel doors. However, the most conclusive proof of the building history of the house is located in the attic where shifts in construction indicate the original building was enlarged to the north and south. In the oldest section riven oak lath is fastened with cut nails, whereas sawn lath is found in the balance of the house.
