Description of Property and Eligibility Determination (Use continuation sheet if necessary and attach map and photo)

The two-story, Colonial Revival house has clapboard siding and a side gabled roof with two pedimented dormers. The entry porch is pedimented with a curved underside and is supported by two posts. A five-step stoop leads to the main entrance and a one-story, side gabled wing is located along the south elevation of the building.

The years leading up to World War II in Prince George's County saw a large increase in the population due to the county's close proximity the nation's capital and the improvement of the roadway systems. The population of Prince George's County increased from 60,000 to 90,000 inhabitants between 1930 and 1940. The establishment of Andrews Air Force Base in 1942 led to both military and civilian developments. The automobile allowed expansion beyond the traditional town design and as the post-World War II era progressed, new road construction resulted in the suburbanization of the previously sparsely-settled portions of northern Prince George's County. Maryland Route 5 (Branch Avenue), constructed in 1950, served as a major artery around the western edge of Andrews Air Force Base.

The c. 1930 Colonial Revival house is not eligible for the National Register. While typical of the pre-World War II
