=====

Facing south on Blackthorn Street, the two-and-a-half story, four-bay house is clad with stucco at the first level and wood shingles at the second. Windows are 6/6 sash at the first and second stories with a single diamond-paned window in the shed dormer at the third half-story. Roof forms sheltering the residence are hip, gambrel, shed, pent, and gable. The front facade features a hip on gable roof with a front gambrel projection. The pedimented front entrance is supported on either side by classical columns. Stone pillars accentuate the front walk and driveway entrances.

An enclosed one-story side wing at the west facade has a flat roof with balustrade. A full-width open porch at the east facade, which would have afforded a view of Connecticut Avenue prior to the construction of the Varnell House c1922, is supported by classical columns and sheltered by the flared eave gable roof.¹ A continuous shed-roof dormer punctuates the roof line at the half-story above the porch.

A stucco-walled garage with pyramidal roof was added between 1931 and 1941.²

The house remains at its original location, now described as Lot 2, Block 3 in Chevy Chase, Section 4, consisting of 18,000 square feet of land.

With its exuberance of architectural detail and variety of roof forms, the Dutch Colonial Revival style Bowie House, built c1913-1915, is a textbook of design features popular at the turn of the twentieth century. The Bowie House also represents the beginning of a new era as the Chevy Chase Land Company sought to attract solidly middle class residents to its development, following a period of financially troubled times.

Joseph W. Bowie purchased Lot 2 and part of Lot 3 in Block 3 from the Chevy Chase Land Company in May 1914. At that time Bowie, a clerk and auditor for the U.S. Post Office Department, resided at 815 M. Street, N.W. in Washington, D.C. According to tax assessment records, the Bowie House was built by the Land Company, apparently serving as a model home for this northern part of Section 4, which had opened for sales in 1910.³ The Land Company had, in 1892, begun the practice of building model houses to entice prospective purchasers to the area and to establish standards for residential design.

Information on the date of construction of the house varies. A book published by the Town of Chevy Chase puts the date at 1913.⁴ A c1915 aerial photo shows the Bowie House with new landscaping in place, while a photo of the house, unlandscaped, was featured in a Land Company promotional brochure in 1916.⁵ Tax assessment records indicate that improvements were conveyed by the Land Company to Bowie in 1915 and were assessed to Bowie in 1917 at $3500. In 1923 improvements were reassessed to Bowie at $4500.⁶ This documented information indicates that the Chevy Chase Land Company continued in Section 4 the practice established in Section 2 of building model homes to set the tone for construction.

Directories list Joseph Bowie at the M Street address in 1915, by which time his occupation was clerk, treasurer at the Post Office Department. By 1927 his home address was on Blackthorn, where he continued to live until at least 1935.⁷
