The Karen S. Reckner House, built circa 1940, relates to the continued expansion and settlement of the Oakland area in the mid-twentieth century. The development of summer vacation resorts and hotels in the Oakland area in the late nineteenth century had helped to stimulate settlement of the region. Although no longer as prominent a resort in the mid-twentieth century, Oakland still remained an important local mercantile and community center, and continued its growth throughout this period. Residential development typically occurred along pre-existing road networks. The Reckner house typifies much of the region's mid-twentieth-century residential architecture.

Research has not identified any associations with the lives of persons significant to the Oakland area's past or with events that have contributed significantly to broad patterns of the area's historical development. The architecture does not represent a particularly distinctive type, period, or method of construction, nor does it represent the work of a master, possess high artistic values, or represent a significant and distinguishable entity whose components may lack individual distinction. This resource has not yet yielded and is not likely to yield significant information important in history or prehistory.

Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

This is a one-story, three-by-two-bay, gable-roofed, stone-faced dwelling with an asymmetrical gable-roofed front entry, a three-sided projecting front bay, and a fully enclosed shed-roofed rear porch. The house faces northwest and is located on an open, gently sloping lot about just northeast of Oakland.

Built on a concrete block foundation, the walls of the house are clad in a dressed uncoursed yellowish stone veneer. The tops of the gables are sheathed in ochre-colored wood shingles. The building is topped with an asphalt-shingled gable roof finished with a narrow flat wooden verge. A single exterior brick chimney rises along the northeast elevation, and four evenly-spaced rectangular metal louvers in the upper gables ventilate the attic.

Windows consist of a mixture of single and paired three-over-one and one-over-one, double-hung wooden sash finished with inset wooden surrounds and rowlock brick sills. Several small one-over-one double-hung sash windows light the cellar. A three-sided projecting angled bay window located on the northwest elevation lights the interior. The front door opening, which is nearly centered on the northwest elevation, is fitted with a solid wood door with a single lozenge-shaped glass pane at the top. A similar door pierces the opposite elevation at cellar level.

Because of the slope of the lot, the original rear porch stands higher above ground level than the front of the house; it rests on a concrete block foundation that once served to enclose a garage below. This porch, which is topped by an asphalt-shingled shed roof, has since been fully enclosed with fibreglas sheathing. An open wooden deck on four-by-four wooden posts stands just to the southeast of this enclosed rear porch. An X-braced wooden balustrade and rail encircle the deck, and a set of open wooden ladder steps leads from the yard up to the deck level. A macadam patio stands adjacent to the enclosed rear porch and the wooden deck.

A gable-roofed, gable-fronted, one-story, two-car frame garage stands just northeast of the house. This building is topped with an asphalt-shingled roof and clad in ochre-colored wooden shingles. Two overhead paneled metal doors on the northwest gable provide access to the interior. A standard-sized wood and multipaned glass door is located on the southwest elevation, and one-over-one double-hung sash windows on the long walls light the interior. A macadam driveway running perpendicular to Memorial Drive leads along the northeast side of the house to the garage, and a concrete walk which parallels the main road leads from the driveway to the front entrance of the house. A second concrete walk leads from the main road to the front door. A stand of deciduous trees shades the front yard, while the rear of the property is mostly open. The house is presently occupied and remains in good condition.
