

George J. Turner House
CH-656
Gallant Green vic.
Private

1928

Constructed in 1928, the George J. Turner House is an excellent local example of a four-square dwelling with modest Prairie-style details, most clearly expressed in its overall emphasis on horizontal lines. Situated in the quickly developing northeastern section of Charles County, the site rests on eleven acres that is buffered by forested areas and open meadows. The house retains a substantial amount of original materials and is surrounded by three likely contemporary outbuildings including a shed, chicken house and garage.

In 1919 two brothers, George J. Turner and T. Spence Turner, purchased 585 acres on the road leading from Gallant Green and Aquasco, and by 1928 George J. Turner had constructed a sizeable dwelling on the northern portion of the property. After his death in 1936, the land was formally divided and his wife, Mary Chichester Turner acquired 285 acres surrounding the dwelling. She lived there until her death in the late 1950's.

Prepare both a one paragraph summary and a comprehensive description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

Constructed in 1928, the George J. Turner House is a two-story, two-bay, four-square dwelling with modest Prairie-style details. The house rests on an eleven acre parcel a short distance from Woodville Road in the northeastern section of Charles County. Although this area has experienced one of the the higher growth rates in the county over the last decade, the site is well buffered with trees and open meadows. Near the dwelling is a garage, chicken house and shed, all considered to contribute to the site's overall significance.

The dwelling, which faces north, is two stories in height with two bays on each elevation. The frame structure rests on a concrete foundation and is clad with cedar shingle siding. The hipped roof with ridge, has been re clad with asphalt shingles and is broken by two brick chimneys. Prairie style details include wide overhanging eaves, banding at the cornices and sill which emphasize horizontal lines, the 6/1 windows throughout, and a full width hipped porch.

The front elevation is distinguished by a the porch which rests on four Tuscan columns and is covered with a metal seam roof. The sheltered entrance to the dwelling is near the east wall and consists of a 12-light door surrounded by a 3-light transom and sidelights. The opposite bay on the first floor is a three window grouping of a standard 6/1 window flanked by a pair of narrower 6/1 windows. The second floor includes two pair of 6/1 windows.

Moving clockwise, the east elevation has a projecting three bay window near the south wall. This bay repeats the same wide cornice banding found under the main roof. The remaining windows are single 6/1; with one found on the first floor and two on the second.

Two single first floor and two single second story 6/1 windows appear on the main wall of the rear elevation next to a more complex fenestration found in the two story shed addition to the east. The addition includes an incised porch entrance on the first floor. A narrow 6/1 window is situated under the incised porch but along the main exterior wall. The door just to the west is further incised and is approached by a later wooden deck. Finally a narrow 6/1 window is found on the first floor south elevation of the shed addition. The second story of this ell has two pair of narrow 6/6 lights on the south wall and a pair each on the east and west elevations. An exterior basement entrance is accessed by a below grade stair nest to the main wall which is sheltered by two joined shed awnings around the first floor east easternmost window.

The west elevation has a projecting bay with a wide banded cornice on the first floor with braced supports. The bay includes a pair of 4-light fixed windows. Additional fenestration includes a 6/1 window on the first floor to the south, and two 6/1 windows on the second story.

The interior was not accessible at the time of the survey. Although the dominant stylistic features would point to a construction date between 1905-1920, tax records indicate a construction date of 1928.

OUTBUILDINGS

The shed, located off the southwest corner of the dwelling, is a small square frame structure covered with wood shingles. Having a front gable orientation, a centered wood panel door provides the only access into the structure. It appears to be in very good condition.

The chicken house is a long rectangular building located at the edge of the rear yard. It is a frame structure with vertical board siding, re clad in asphalt panels intended to resemble brick. A simple vertical board door is located near the east wall.

The garage is a front gable frame structure that faces west. Both the roof and the walls are currently clad in asphalt panels. Double doors are composed of vertical boards.

Prepare a one-paragraph summary statement of significance addressing applicable criteria, followed by a narrative discussion of the history of the resource and its context. (For compliance reports, complete evaluation on a DOE Form - see manual.)

The George J. Turner House is one of a handful of documented examples of the Prairie style in Charles County. Believed to have been built in 1928, the house retains an exceptional amount of original materials. In 1919, two brothers T. Spank Turner and George J. Turner purchased a farm known as part of Reading, Gravelly Walk and Butler's Place along the main road between Aquasco and Gallant Green. By 1936 George J. Turner had died, leaving his portion of the property to his wife, Mary Chichester Turner. Shortly afterwards T. Spence Turner and his sister-in-law, Mary Chichester Turner, decided to divide the property. Mary Chichester Turner acquired the dwelling house along with 215 acres standing on the northern section of the original parcel and continued to live in the dwelling for the remainder of her life until 1958 when it was willed to Margaret J. Chichester. In 1971 the property, then reduced to 12 acres, was transferred to Anthony and Judith Reynolds.

Originating in Chicago, the Prairie style is one of the few indigenous American styles. While landmark examples tend to appear in early 20th century suburbs, vernacular versions were popularized by pattern books and popular magazines. Largely fading out of fashion after World War II, this example, which according to tax records was constructed in 1928, illustrates how popular styles tended to remain popular in rural areas like Charles County after fading from national prominence.
