Noah Long House
Continuation Sheet 7.1

Description

This modest farmstead was built in 1897 by Noah Long, according to his descendent, John Long. It is composed of a greatly altered two-story frame house, combination summer kitchen/washhouse southeast of the dwellings, a shed, a bankbarn and brick agricultural outbuilding. These buildings may have replaced an earlier farmstead on the property. According to John Long, it was constructed as a tenant house complex by Noah Long, son of Miles Long who owned considerable acreage north of the West Branch of the Patapsco River and east of North Gorsuch Road. This land composed the original holdings of the Long Family in the area, composed of land grants known as Sarah's Pleasure (later Sarah's Purchase), and parts of Rochester, Lovell's Prospect, Long Branch Vineyard, and Snake Den. Sarah's Purchase was surveyed for Peter Long in 1797.

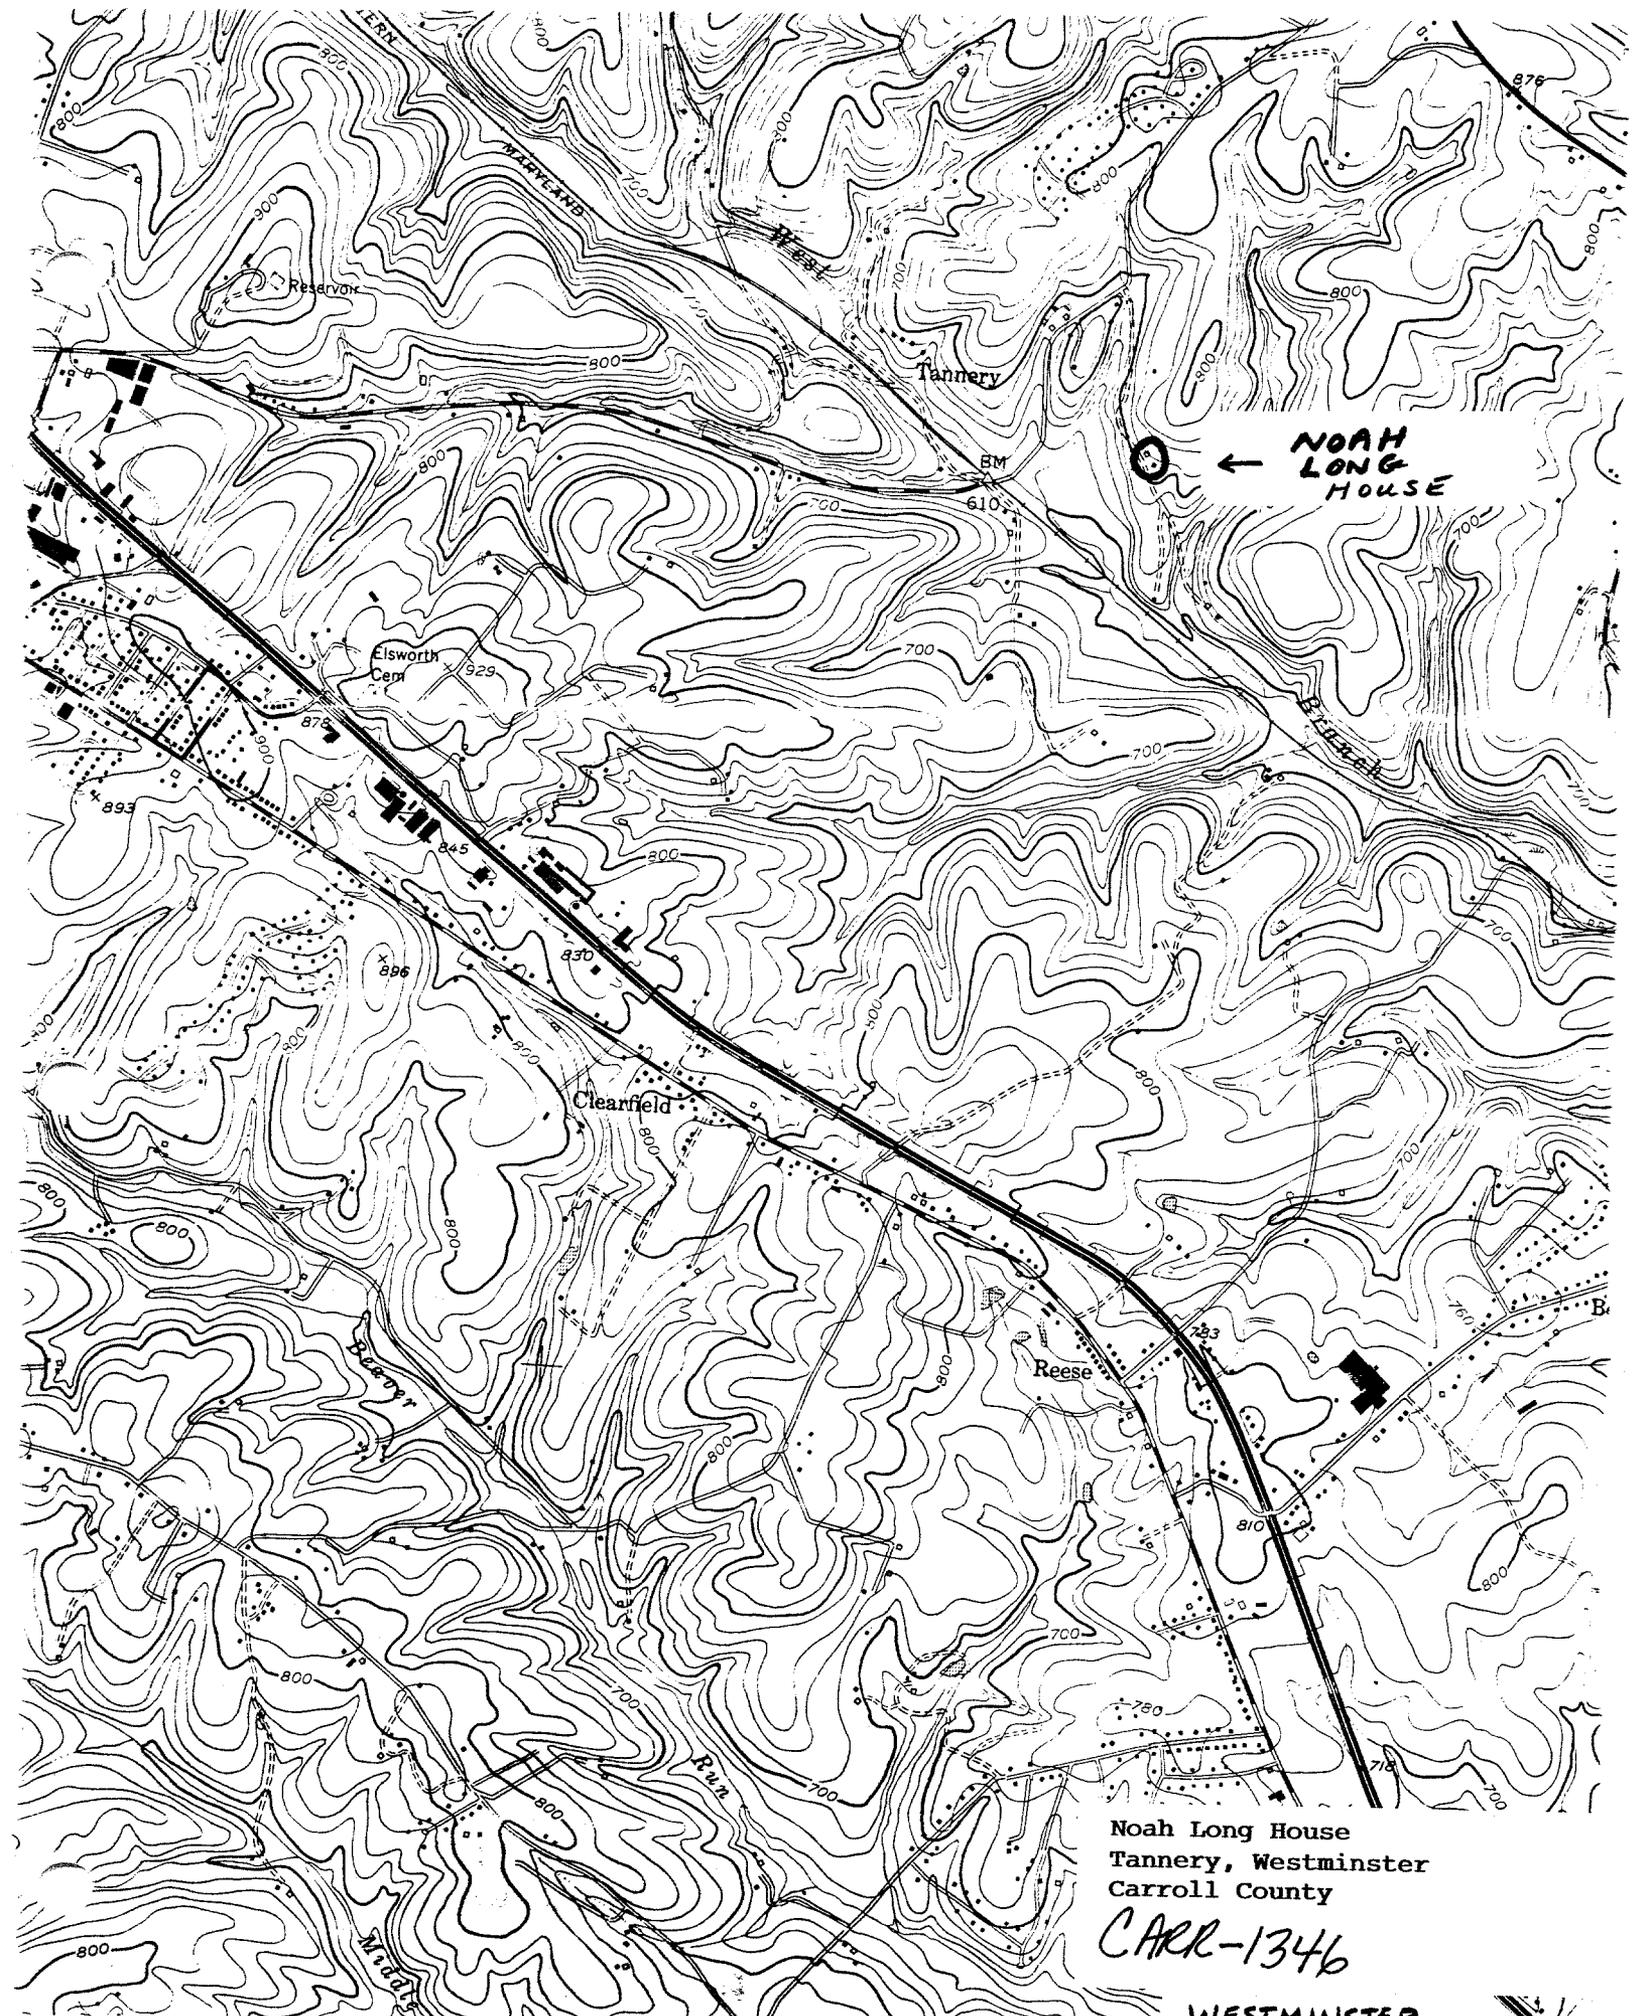

Miles Long inherited the land and lived at the farmstead to the southeast at the end of the long entrance road that extends southeast from its junction with North Gorsuch Road. All of the dwellings which existed prior to the twentieth century and housed Miles Long and those Longs which preceeded him are no longer extant, according to a Long descendent and family historian John Long. The only buildings which pre-date the twentieth century are a log barn and possible a log meathouse located at the Miles Long site.

The dwelling, constructed by Noah Long, is oriented to the southwest, and because of severe alterations to the exterior in the form of bay windows, replacement windows, vertical siding, new chimneys and extensive additions, has lost all integrity. The interior has been greatly modernized. This structure, and its outbuildings are located on a rise and are oriented along the northeast side of the entrance road in a line. To the northwest of the dwelling is located a modernized bank barn and frame garage. To the southeast of the house is located a two-story frame washhouse/kitchen, and a square brick domestic outbuilding off its northwest corner. A shed and some frame additions intervene between the rear of the dwelling, the washhouse and the brick outbuilding.

Significance

This turn of the century complex of farm buildings was constructed by Noah Long, possibly for use by a tenant, on the extensive property passed down through the Long family during the nineteenth century. Although lacking integrity, some local significance accrues to this site for its association with the Long family, who owned considerable property in the area on both sides of the West Branch of the Patapsco River east of Tannery.
