The Joseph Stoner House, located at 1161 Old Taneytown Road, west of Westminster in Carroll County, MD, contributes to the Roop Rural Historic District. The property consists of a late 19th-century brick dwelling, a mid-20th-century dairy barn and several 20th-century associated agricultural buildings. The agricultural buildings are clustered together at the end of a long, curvilinear drive and amongst the rolling hills, similarly dotted with farm complexes. The grouping of buildings and their location on the landscape contribute to the rural historic district.

Documentation on the property is presented in: Project Review and Compliance Files

Joseph Stoner House
Continuation Sheet 7.1

Description

All that remains of the Joseph Stoner Farm, owned by Ezra Brown in 1916, is a modest two-story brick dwelling which was built into a hill on the west side, thus exposing the basement level on the east side. The gable end is currently oriented north toward Old Taneytown Pike, although the principal elevation with centered entrance is oriented to the west. Brick chimneys are located inside the end walls, but the one on the south has been extended outside the wall with brick. A one-story shed roofed porch extends two-thirds of the breadth of the west elevation, wraps around the northwest and northeast corners (thus the full width of the north elevation) to terminate between the second and third bays on the east elevation. The east elevation, also with a centered entrance, has a fenestration pattern which differs from that on the west, although the fenestration in the in the two gable ends is entirely regular. A doorway evidently surmounted the first floor entry on the east elevation at one time, but has been closed in. The windows are six-over-six replacement vinyl sash, and the entrance is surmounted by a three-part transom. The structure is built upon a stone foundation, but the porch on the north is supported on concrete block with some infill sections.

The outbuildings were constructed between 1952 and 1971. An historic archeological site (Delaney - 18CR208) has been identified on the property. All artifacts were consistent with the late nineteenth century construction date of the house.

Joseph Stoner House
Continuation Sheet 8.1

Significance

This undistinguished, late nineteenth century brick house is attributed to Joseph Stoner. The integrity of location of the Stoner historic site has been greatly diminished by the construction of a very large, metal bank barn, as well as a large, two part concrete block agricultural building. There are no period outbuildings on the site. A parcel has evidently been divided from the farm and a modern, ranch-style dwelling, built on it. It shares the same entrance and is located south of the Stoner House.
