Dear Ed,

I would be happy to conduct a seminar for your teachers' institute. Your "Daily Life in the New World" unit is closely related to my own work. Teachers and students should get the kind of first-hand account of early Maryland that the documents you have selected provide.

As a previous visitor to teachers' institutes at the State Archives, I have seen the value of scholars and teachers sharing information. I am also interested to see how the electronic classroom helps teachers and students use seventeenth century sources.

I look forward to seeing you and the teachers in October.

Sincerely,

Lois Green Carr
