This matter of testing reaches to the heart of our daily living and affects nearly everything with which we have to do. The food that we cat, the cloth in our garments, the wagons or cars in which we ride-all are in some way tested or proven before we make use of them. We can each cite a multitude of cases that come to our notice every day. And as we are given to passing judgment upon the material things about us, so we are being judged and proven by a higher power than ourselves. The great ques.ion is: Are es are to be tested. PERFECT HARM INY. One may imagine a musical instrument left ! in some old castle deserted during political revolutions, standing warped and cracked with heat and dampness—unstrung, untuned and voiceless. But at length the owner returns, and the tuner is summoned to put the instrument in order. He lifts the cover and the dust rolls back in clouds. "Ah!".he , says, "it is a noble instrument," grandest of makers." He strikes a chord—a aldeous discord, rather which drives P' descers from the place. TALK ABOUT IT. He who is determined to become "rich toward God," and to that end is looking carefully after the various sources of spiritual revenue, will by no means neglect opportun-ities for religious conversation. He will feel that he cannot afford to lose the stimulus to his zeal and the enlargement of his religion knowledge that comes from comparing experiences with others.
