The census returns of France enumerate 161,271 cycles which are used solely for pleasure. Those used by tradesmen in any of their business transactions are not taxed. On that account the losten necessary to summon reason to our above figures fail to convey anything like an accurate idea of the number of wheels owned in that country.

In Belgium, Holland, Germany, Austria and Italy the bicycle is fast superseding all other means of locomotion, especially where pleasure and health are the objects sought. In short, the bicycle has, within a very few years, become a very necessary adjunct to modern civilization.

Why She Wanted a Continuance. An old lawyer once told about a case ' he had, but which he didn't keep. An old Irishwoman sent for him in great haste one day. She wanted him to meet her in the criminal court. He hastened to the court house all out of ' breath. The woman's son was about to ' be placed on trial for burglary. When the lawyer entered the court room the old woman rushed up to him and in an excited voice said:
