REV. JOSEPH C. REID.

Fort Madison, Iowa.

The session of the Association was one of the most interesting meetings I have ever wiinessed in my life. There were several questions involved and it looked as if it would split the whole Association. Some of the people were after William H. Steward. I do not know the cause of all this, but they were after him just the same. Nobody has ever accused William H. Steward of sleeping. He is the strongest living Baptist in Kentucky today, and he more friends who would die by him, need be, than any other one man in the

I am unable to tell you just what the had against him. Some accused him of the "divy" act, some said that he had been in office long enough, while others said they would liked to have left of where they took up, or something like For some reasons known to them they decided that Steward must die, so Steward organized his 'must live' friends, and they said they were ready to stand by their leader, and with this in front of him Steward stepped into the
