like for you to see it for yourself. Talk about fine music, I could stay down here all my life if I could hear such sweet music. It has been said by those who know that Cole and Johnson are two of the best educated men of our race on the American stage, and I am inclined to believe it too. They write their plays, write their own music, and Their Work,-They Are Doing then play them. We need a few more men like that in this country. There is nothing in the play to give offense the Southern white man, and in my opinion much good will be accomplished and the young men will be paid for their labor.
