

This image shows a blank ledger page from an old account book. The page is ruled with a grid of lines. At the top, there is a header section with diagonal lines sloping downwards from left to right. Below this header, the page is divided into ten vertical columns of varying widths. The columns are separated by thin vertical lines, and a single horizontal line runs across the page just below the header section, creating a header row. The rest of the page is empty, with no text or numbers written in the cells.