

St Michaels 22nd June

I anchored yesterday at this delightful Island and shall sail tomorrow morning having got a supply of water and every other necessaries that can be desired. We dined yesterday with Mr Reed the Captain or subject rather was just what a person in his situation ought to be. He was every way a sensible and understands the business of supplies well there is a superabundance of grain and if you have a large expectation the appearance is very promising the mountains are cultivated to the tops - these Islands till lately were in little estimation but the ~~best~~ of Europe have obliged these countrymen to have recourse to them for supplies - our Commodore makes great use of them, you will find some pleasant accounts of the waves in the encyclopaedia better than I can give you So So women was here and his presence and had the satisfaction of meeting his cousin Mr. Butler in Law Genl. Clowry who has resided here some years indeed every where he disposed himself
