

Anne is not pursuing the road to happiness and comfort, for early ^{friends} were much more worthy than her present, and so she will discover if as a votary of fashion her taste does not become quite debased, I think your Mother must have some twitches of conscience on her account, some year ago she might by due exertion ~~have~~ kept her in a better path, now it would be difficult. William was he to undertake it, would have best chance of success, I am sure that it was your Father. I think you might speak to Cousin Tottle to apply to his Cousin to promote they word, he will do it with pleasure, Mother Brown is an animal I think John is right to fix in London for the truth is he never could keep from it, I like his Poem but yet I wish he had not published it, but I am not a fair judge judging from to verse you need not tell him this, but it is of no consequence he tells me very much in such
-points
