New county school

School authorities in Baltimore county have announced that planning is underway on a fifth new public elementary school modeled according the same architectural plan. Identified as the Middleborough Elementary School, the new one-story structure will be erected in the county's Back River Neck area under plans adapted from those used in the design of the county's new Johnnycake Elementary School which is now under construction in the Catonsville area.

"Except for re-alignment and the elimination of a sixclassroom wing, necessitated by the size of the structure's ultimate pupil attendance area.
