Low-cost housing plan to be aired Wednesday

A public hearing will be held at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the City Council chamber, City Hall, on a Council resolution proposing a study of a new program for low-cost housing development in the city.

The hearing will be before the Council's Housing Committee, headed by Councilman Henry G. Parks Jr. (4th).

The Resolution 1967 proposes a Housing Development Commission, under jurisdiction of the Baltimore Urban Renewal and Housing Agency, to encourage new housing for low-income families to be erected by private developer with city funds.

THE RESOLUTION would have such housing erected in designated areas, and be made available to the nearly 3,000 families who are now awaiting public housing.

Thomas D'Alesandro 3rd, Council president and sponsor of the resolution, envion the proposed commission having the authroity to approve loans to developers, oversee construction and to establish maximum sale prices of these homes.

From the financial community the city would seek assistance in permanent financing for the purchases of these homes at low interest rates and with low settlement costs.

He pointed out that the problem was one that confronts all racial and economic segments of society but that cases in more affluent families are often never made a part of public record because they are handled through private channels.

Referrals, according to Tayback, often result from concern of the parents. Some come from public health nurses, doctors and community health agencies.

Only a few of the girls referred are issued contraceptives, according to hospital officials.

"The program," Tayback pointed out, "will not be carried out with any punitive attitudes. It is designed to help individuals cope with a turbulent situation that could arise in their lives."

"We are highly dubious of the impact of sex education in the schools and the current group of techniques," said Tayback.

Tayback said the program was started at Sinai Hospital because of its "long history of involving itself with the community and because more recently, it has had a strong interest in the problems of adolescents."

The program is being financed by a grant from an unnamed philantrophic institution. The basic stipend is $20,000 but this figure can be increased upwards to $40,000 if the program directors find it necessary.

on an individual basis."

Mrs.Anita Henson, a registered nurse, said she feels that in cases where girls are sexually active" and it's an established fact that the parents can't cope with the problem that the pill should be made available

"I don't feel it will promote promiscuity," she said, "because apparently it is already there.It will give the girls a chance to think out their lives and have a chance not to be burdened with children before they are ready."

BALTIMORE physician, Dr. Bernard Harris Sr., said the program could help control illigitimacy but that at the same time selectivity and supervision must be employed.

Everyone, however, was not as ready to sanction the program.

Mrs. Naomi Camper,a civic leader, said,"I don't think it's the thing to do. I guess I am just one of the old fashioned school. I think it would only encourage girls to do things."

Mrs. Delores C. Hunt, principal of the Franklin Square Elementary School, said she felt the program could be a "vicious thing" and for that reason she would not recommend its use on a wide scale basis.

"It should be a limited measure," she said, "but there should be other methods with which to deal with the problem."

Dr. Louise Young said it could be a good thing under proper supervision but the recipients must know controls won't prevent venereal disease and are not the solutions to moral problems and other issues.

3 churches in court suits

election, the Mount Winans officials state they intend to elect a new pastor and officials.

Stating they intend to hold a proper and legal election in the future the church officials asked the court (1) to invalidate the election they claim was illegally held, (2) appoint a trustee under Maryland law to supervise the new election, (3) grant any other such relief the law allows.

The petition was filed April 14. The same day Judge Meyer Cardin signed an order giving the Rev. Mr. Turner until May 1 to show cause why the church officials should not be granted their requests.

Officials who are named as petitioners are Eugene Battle, James Fallin, Julius Weems, James Keys, Earl Thomas and William Shipmon.

MORNING STAR Baptist Church as a body and Marion Harris, chairman of the board of trustees, are defendants in a suit filed by Mrs. Mary Wicks, president of the Community Missionary Bible Class, 227 N. Fulton Ave.

The original petition was filed in Circuit Court No. 2 through Paul B. Engel, the attorney for Mrs. Wicks, wife of the former pastor, the Rev. Nathaniel Wicks.

The Rev. Mr. Wicks was retired early this year.

Papers before the court state that in Nov., 1959, $3,759.39 was deposited in trust in the Maryland National Bank at Baltimore and Carey St. for the Bible Class.

Subsequently, the Bible Class asked that the money be returned to them and the church and board of trustees refused, it is alleged.

MRS. WICKS and her group therefore asked the court to take action to obtain the money for them and to enjoin the bank from allowing the church and Mr. Harris from withdrawing the money.

On April 3, Judge Meyer Cardin signed an order asking Mr. Harris and the church to show cause why Mrs. Wicks and the Bible Class should not have requests granted.

The latest action of the court came Friday when an extention until April 21 was allowed the church and the official to answer the order.

THE SUPERIOR COURT petition against Gethsemane Baptist Church was filed by Mrs. Ida Mae Pryor, 1500 block N. Aisquith St., and William Pryor, her husband, same address.

Through their attorney Sidney Goldsheider they ask Mr. and Mrs. Pryor be granted a total of $17,500 damages for injuries the wife sustained in a fall at the church.

Asking a jury trial, the suit alleges Mrs. Pryor sustained the injuries May 23, 1964 at 8 p.m. when she was descending an inside stairway to the church vestibule.

The weak, defective and hazardous condition of the steps and a metal strip covering the edge of a step caused her to trip, Mrs. Pryor states.

As a result she says she sustained serious and permanent injuries and her wage-earning capacities were impaired. For the damages the matron asks $15,000.

The husband, Mr. Pryor, asks an additional $2,500 for the damages he suffered as the result of his wife's injuries. Included are loss of her services, the substantial sums he has spent in medical and hospital care.

Agnew backed on wiretapping

The executive director of the Maryland Branch of the American Civil Liberties Union this week commended Governor Agnew on his stand against wiretapping.

In a letter to the governor, Earl L. Carey Jr. cited him for his "unequivocal stand against the use of wiretapping."

He stated the ACLU's position "against wiretapping or the use of other electronic eavesdropping devices by any person or agency for any reason whatever."

The ACLU's position is based on Fourth Amendment stipulations against the use of general warrants and searches by government officials and "the basic right of the citizen to the protection of his privacy."

MR. CAREY said of Police Commissioner Donald D. Pomerleau, who had advocated the use of wiretapping in numbers cases, that "many signs indicate that he is the right man for the job."

But he regretted the commissioner "should have fallen for the suggestion that the police cannot catch the number writer higher-ups unless they use wiretaps."

Freedom Union still growing

Two years of civil rights activity at Roth's Supermarket in the East Baltimore area have paid off for members of the Maryland Freedom Union.

Two years ago workers at the supermarket were making 50 to 75 cents an hour and were working up to 60 hours a week with no sick leave or vacation.

A recently agreed upon contract provides wages of $1.50 for full time workers plus paid vacations, sick leaves and holidays.

When the campaign was initiated, workers at Roth's joined with the local chapter of the Congress of Racial Equality to plan a consumer boycott.

But the management agreed to pay workers $1 an hour and no boycott was considered necessary at that time.

BUT BY April of 1966 the $1 an hour was no longer considered sufficient. Collective bargaining took palce with workers negotiating their own contracts and the store's management agreed to pay the $1.50 wage with fringe benefits.

Last January, the union held elections and reorganized its structure so that all officers of the union are workers.

CORE says the union will continue to direct its activities towards bettering the conditions of workers in retail outlets in and around the Baltimore area.

MARINE RECRUITERS — Sgt. Ivy A. Ennels and Cpl. Veronica O. Fielding have recently been assigned to Marine Recruiting posts in Baltimore.

Marines attack with female recruiter here

Cpl. Veronica O. Fielding since January has been serving as the first Woman Marine recruiter of her race at the Marine Corps Recruiting station, U.S. Customs House, Gay and Lombard Sts.

The 23-year-old St. Louis Marine's responsibilities include lecturing at Baltimore high schools on "career days" and making information available for all women interested in a career with the Corps.

She enlisted in October, 1964, and upon completion of recruit training at Parris Island, S.C., she attended communications school at Camp Lejeune, N.C. for seven weeks.

After the teletype operators course, she was assigned to the communications center at the Marine Corps Air Station, Cherry Point, N.C.

CPL. FIELDING was then promoted to the job of noncommissioned officer in charge of the Women Marine communications detachment. In October, 1966, Cpl. Fielding extended her tour of duty for nine months to attend the recruiters school at Parris Island.

Her service career ends June, 1968, unless she re-enlists.

"FOR THOSE who are not familiar with the founding and purpose of the WM," said Cpl. Fielding, "The Woman Marine Corps is a rapidly growing organization of women whose former duties were to replace male Marines on the home front when a national emergency takes them away from the States.

"Presently our duties are extended. We have women in almost every phase of Marine life," she adds.

Cpl. Fielding is the daughter of Mrs. Major Mosley of 1620 Bond Ave., East St. Louis, Ill., and she is a graduate of Lebanon Community High School, Lebanon, Ill.

ALSO ASSIGNED Marine recruiting here and working out of the Calvert Building is S/Sgt. Ivy A. Ennels, a native of Cambridge.

The 31-year-old career Marine, who includes a stint in Viet Nam among duty spots has in 13 years and in typical recruiter fashion says that after he completes his 20-year hitch will probably go for 30.

A former tank commander, Sgt. Ennels received a Purple Heart for a wound in Viet-Nam during his 13 months there.

AFRO executive hits advertising policies

OAKLAND Calif. — An AFRO executive charged here last week that advertisers and advertising agencies are engaged in a "calculated device" to drive colored-orientated businesses into bankruptcy.

Kenneth O. Wilson, vice president and director of advertising for the AFRO-AMERICAN Newspapers, leveled the accusation in a speech to the Committee for Plans for Progress.

The meeting, held in the Kaiser Center, in conjunction with efforts of the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity.

"Advertisers and agencies," Mr. Wilson declared, "are ignoring the colored press in favor of mass media."

Pointing to statistics showing that department stores with a large colored clientele "never went near the colored press," Mr. Wilson added:

"WE BELIEVE that the placement of this advertising in mass media is to avoid the use of colored newspapers in principal cities."

In obvious reference to current trends which indicate that colored residents will soon constitute the majority population of several major cities, the press executive told his audience:

"We believe it is a calculated device on the part of advertising management to strengthen the big dailies in the United States to keep the cash flow in white businesse and to reduce the profit picture of colored-orientated businesses until bankruptcy."

Mr. Wilson's views are consistent with those voiced by other critics of big business and government, whom they say, are following a policy of economic strangulation of colored-orientated businesses.

COLLINGTON SQUARE School pupils enjoy brief chat with Mayor McKeldin as City chief participated in dedication and open house ceremonies at the ultra-modern school facility Tuesday night.
