Lawyers' Wives set cool pace at party

The Lawyers' Wives played it real cool, Saturday afternoon.

They paved Bolton Hill Dinner Theatre with wall-to-wall people, for cocktails luncheon and the matinee of "Pajama Tops," all the while looking as if they hadn't lifted a finger to achieve the perfect party.

All to the credit of Madame Chairman Grace L. Walker, and her efficient cohorts.

• • •

And the Lady herself looked cool in a chic white dress, sparked with rhinestone buttons . . . but while she was followed by a galaxy in white they weren't in dresses. A score or more were topping the fashion heights in pant- suits, including Sallie Fletcher and Adele Foreman. One of the cutest outfits was the thigh high maternity frock worn by Mrs. Alexander (Windy) Robinson. Josephine Brown in a gray with self-fringe at the skirt bottom; Bea Wright in gold knit, flares at wrist, hips and skirt end; Harriett Jones in classic navy, brightened with an exotic scarf; Mrs. Solomon Reddick in a white lingerie frock, spiced with tucks and embroidery; Bernice McDaniels in a soft yellow all served to provide the fashion show.

But in their own way, the Wives as usual managed to get the message across that they were not there merely to look pretty, sip a cocktail and greet friends.

They were also celebrating Law Day, marking an anniversary, and dedicating scholarships and urging more young people into the legal field, as urged by the Monumental Bar Association president, Deputy Benjamin Browne. He was there with his pretty bride, the former Stephanie Laforest, and made the Monumental Bar's plea for aid in this field. Also about was State's Attorney Milton Allen. She was late arriving. Had she explained important church business to participate in.

In addition to being a great bunch to look at, Doug Roberts who directed "Pajama Tops," based on the French farce, Moumou, by Jean de Letraz, said the Lawyers' Wives and their guests were the best audience the dinner theatre had seen this season.

• • •

In addition to Mrs. Walker, the hostesses includ:

Mesdames Brenda Allen, Lorraine Hayes, Marian Russell, Maria Carroll, Dorothy Reddick, Jacquelyn Watts, Martha Allen,

Interested in getting more take-home pay every week? Need more mpney to pay your bills and give your family the best?

Who isn't?

Ambitious men and women who work during the day have found that the route to better paying jobs is by being trained and repared. And the way to better training is by enrolling in the evening courses at the Community College of Baltimore.

These classes are given at the Liberty Campus and a number of off-campus centers in your own neighborhood. The CCB courses are offered by competent teachers at high school buildings — such as Northern, Northwestern, Southern, Dunbar and Patterson. Adults may enroll also in the summer sessions and get a head start on their careers.

"Students study introduction to business, business management and accounting in the evening classes," explained Dean Herman E. Westerberg, of the Division of Continuing Education which sponsors the evening programs. "Others interested in business, study business law or advertising and public relations. A new profession has opened: data processing, and a variety of computer courses are given. Students are attracted also to the secretarial classes because of the practical instruction given."

Informal Courses Improve Business Skills, Widen Knowledge

Many adults are interested in engineering, hence they enroll in the construction, drafting and electronics. For those who would like to work in hospitals and clinics, courses in the Allied Health occupations are taught. Others may want to brush up on their math or science, and qualified teachers are ready to present these subjects interestingly.

Interested in law-enforcement? Careers may grow out of your interest in juvenile and correctional work. CCB has a full program in the administration of justice and security.

Many adults in Baltimore are not interested in college credits as much as the practical knowledge which will help them on their jobs. Others are concerned about acquiring additional educational background and improving their skills — just for the fun of it.

These individuals—men and women — take the formal courses given by the Division of Community Services, of which Dean Milton S. Dugger is head.

Some new courses scheduled theatre and human relations for the coming summer were workshop pointed out by Mr. Joseph Gardiner, co-ordinator for the informal programs.

"We think readers of this publication would benefit by enrolling in the Insurance Opportunities Unlimited or the Human Heredity Course," he explained. Our class in 'Making Sense' has proved popular with those who wish to learn to think logically and to communicate effectively. The advanced photography course and the law for the layman prove interesting to many adults."

The division is also introducing courses in aviation, such as helicopter flight. Housewives may be interested in the ice carving and cake decorating as well as the course called "practical Fun with Convenience Foods," and another course dealing with interior design and decoration.

Mr. Gardiner said that standard courses which have been enjoyed and benefited people before will also be given this summer: high school equivalency exam preparation, speed reading, real estate, musical
