Admission to the Festival of Music is free with free Stadium parking.

Bus driver rescues 3 from flames

Pace, school bus driver for the United Cerebral Palsy Association headquarters on Overlook Drive, SE, said he had just done his job on a day that was a little less than routine. He made this statement after rescuing three handicapped passengers from his burning bus.

Last Friday, as if by premonition, he exchanged his old fire extinguisher for a new one.

The incident occurred Monday when fire broke out in the engine, enveloping the front of the vehicle in smoke anl flames. Pace quickly pulled his three handicapped passengers from the bus — including one in a wheelchair — and applied his new fire extinguisher.

By the time police and the firemen arrived, the blaze was under control, and, to his three passengers, the bus driver was a hero.

Foster New CTW Story Editor

George Foster, whose experience has ranged from street gang worker and photojournalist to TV reporter and documentary producer, has joined the Children's Television Workshop as story editor for the organization's upcoming reading series, "The Electric Company."

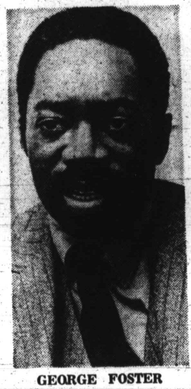
The new daily half-hour series devoted to the teaching of reading to children 7 to 10 will premiere Oct. 25. Foster's appointment was announced by David Connell, Workshop vice president and executive producer.

Foster will manage two projected story-telling segments of the series, both designed to reach the inner-city child experiencing difficulty in reading.

"His background of objectivity in news reporting and intimacy with inner-city communities qualifies Foster exceptionally well for judging reading show material," said Connell.

* * *

One serial will be written alternately by several prominent writers, who may include Ray Bradbury, William Saroyan, Piri Thomas and Ossie Davis. The second serial will be a group of youngstrs in real-life adventures, and while it is intended to reflect city life, the story will take the youths to a variety of locales.



GEORGE FOSTER

Foster said he became enthused about the workshop, which also produces an ongoing story featuring "Sesame Street," because it "was looking for the first time in a real practical sense at what was being done with this 'tube' and trying to deal with its incredible potential for good or evil."

He is a native of Akron, Ohio, served in the U.S. Army and then earned barhelor's and master's degrees from Teachers College of Columbia University. He also is a doctoral candidate at New York University.

Foster was a teacher and street gang worker in New York City from 1957 through 1961, luring which time he also provided family and group counseling at the famous Henry Street Settlement. The next year he became acting principal of the Bellevue Psychiatric Hospital School in New York.

His interest in education and communications then led him into photography and photojournalism. Over a five-year period his accomplishments included the filmstrip, "The High School Dropout — The Road to Nowhere"; the reading series, "When People Talk;" brochure photos of a tour of Americans in Russia; vocational guidance films; cover photos for the New York Herald Tribune Magazine and Saturday Review, and fashion and advertising work.

Foster joined CBS News in 1967.

He lives in New Rochelle, N.Y. His wife, Joan, is a writer and consultant on educational publications. They have two sons.

Chi area pulling self up on show

A community's efforts to redevelop Chicago's West Side will be the focus on Part III of "...To the People," the concluding broadcast in a report on the empowerment of minority groups through church funding, on "Look Up and Live" Sunday, Aug. 8 (10:30-11 a.m., EDT) on CBS.

The broadcast looks principally at the West Side Community Development Corporation which connects the activities of live groups instituting economic and political advances in the area.

Among the groups are the Garfield Organization, which uses a paper processing plant and a muffler shop to provide jobs and profits for blacks, and the Conservative Vice Lords, a former gang now involved in constructive activites — such as running a luncheonette, a boutique and an art gallery.

The Rev. Dr. Lucius Walker, executive director of the Inter-religious Foundation for Community Organization, is the host, and guests include Douglas Andrews, director of the Garfield Organization; the Rev. Roy Neal, chairman of the board of the Garfield Organization; Robert Katovich, a vice president of the Container Corporation of America, representing corporate interest in community projects, and members of the Conservative Vice Lords.
