Community health center now open

A new Park Heights Community Health Center has been opened in Northwest Baltimore through the joint efforts of the Northwest Baltimore Corporation, the Northwest Health Services, Inc. and the Baltimore City Health Department.

Services for residents include a preschool child health clinic, family planning and dental care.

Located in the New Elizabeth Baptist Church, 4901 Park Heights Ave., the center has two waiting rooms, four interviewing rooms, four examining rooms, a laboratory, a supply room, a business office and an office for Druid Health District Public Health Nurse Team 6.

The child health clinic is open Tuesday and Friday at 12:30 p.m. and Thursday at 9 a.m. The family planning clinic is open Monday at 12:30 p.m. Both child health and family planning services are free and by appointment only by calling 542-4333. The dental clinic, a new low cost service for area residents, is provided Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. by the Northwest Health Services, Inc.

Miller Brewery picks L.A. firm

MILWAUKEE — John A. Murphy, Miller Brewing Company president, announced the appointment of Jeffries and Associates, Los Angeles, as marketing consultants.

Present at the appointment were Thomas B. Shropshire, vice president, market planning and a member of the Miller board of directors; Murphy and LeRoy W. Jeffries, president of Jeffries and Associates.

Shropshire said that Jeffries responsibilities will be in the areas of public relations and management counsel in behalf of Miller High Life, Miller Malt Liquor, Meister Brau and other Miller Brewing Company brands.

Jeffries is a graduate of Wilberforce University, has a Master of Arts degree from Columbia University and received an Honorary Doctor of Humanities degree from Wilberforce. He was recently appointed consul of the Republic of Liberia for the state of California.

Women face upsurge in federal jobs

WASHINGTON — The Civil Service Commission's annual survey of employment of women in the Federal Government, conducted in October 1972, shows gains in both overall percentage of women employed and in upward movement of women in the work force.

Women accounted for almost 9,000 or 33 per cent of the gain of 15,360 Federal white-collar employees during the period October 1971 to October 1972.

While there were both gains and losses at individual grade levels in the grade groups GS-7 to GS-12, the number of women increased overall by 882 while men decreased by 2,034.

Most of the gain for women in this group occurred at GS-9 and above.

At grade levels GS-13 and above, both the women and their percentage of the total increased at each grade level with the percentage increases for women being grater than for men at every level.

These gains continued at the supergrade or equivalent levels (GS-16, GS-17, GS-18 or above) where there was an increase of 20 women (13 GS-16's, three GS-17's, and four GS-18's), while males decreased by 496.

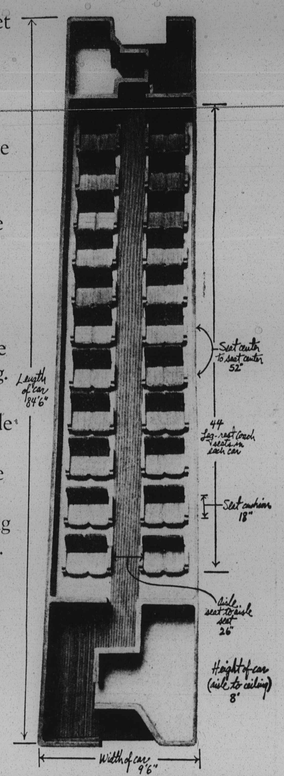
TAKE A SEAT. ANY SEAT. IF IT ISN'T COMFORTABLE, IT ISN'T AMTRAK.

Three's a crowd and Amtrak knows it. That's why wherever you go by train, Amtrak seats are always two abreast, never three abreast. This is the reclining coach seat we use on most short trips. It's got more leg room, more hip room, more sheer comfort than any seat on a bus or plane. And that little Foot-Rest gives you the support you need when you want to lie back and snooze.

Amtrak Foot-Rest coach seat used on most short trips.

Below, we present "Big Stretch," the adjustable Leg-Rest coach seat you'll find on most overnight or long-distance trips. How big? Well, a husky six-footer can stretch out virtually full length without touching head or toe to the next seat. (Try doing that on a bus or plane. Or even in your own car.) But on a train you're not confined to any seat, not even one as comfortable as this. You're free to get up and stroll, talk to people across the aisle or go up to the lounge for refreshments.

One thing more to remember about traveling Amtrak. We not only give you more space in your seat but around it. Take a closer look at this diagram of the interior of our Leg-Rest coach. Notice the two-abreast seating. The ample space between seats. The wide aisles. The fact is, Amtrak gives you more "riding room" per passenger than anything else on wheels or wings. Call Amtrak or your Travel Agent. Find out how little it costs to be really comfortable.



Note the wide spacing in this Amtrak Leg-Rest coach. Planes and buses squeeze more seats into this same space. No wonder you're always more comfortable on an Amtrak train.

We're making the trains worth traveling again.

Arthur C. Lamb, Sr. 27 years at Morgan

When the official 1973 school year ends at Morgan State College around the first of June, so will the lengthy, but brilliant career of teaching and directing drama for Arthur Clifton Lamb, Sr.

Coming to Morgan State twenty-seven years ago, a native of Muscatine, Iowa, has written over 40 plays and radio scripts. The most famous of his plays have been "Black Woman in White" and "Rough Shod Up the Mountain."

His benchmark and his legacy, as he departs from active services as an associate professor in the newly-formed department of speech communication and theatre arts, has been his strong advocacy for student involvement in the technique of television and radio operations.

Throughout his full and fruitful years of service as a teacher of communication skills, Lamb was calling for the strong preparation of Morgan students in radio broadcasting and secured employment for many of them in site of insufficient equipment and the blatant racism which existed then in the professional communications field.

Public recognition of Lamb's push in the theatrical world was given at the recent opening of the College's First Annual Black Arts Festival. "From the days when the department of English was housed in the old Carnegie Hall and plays were staged in the old Morgan 'dust bowl,' to the performance of drama in the lower level of the College Christian Center, to efforts, still existing, to have adequate productions in the new Fine Arts Little Theatre, he has been a source of strength and guidance."

His early call for educational television has led to the College's offering academic preparation in television and increased student awareness in the need to understand and utilize the sophisticated methods of modern-day videotaping and re-broadcast.

In the tribute to Lamb, who received the A.B. degree in English from Grinnell College and the A.M. degree from the State University of Iowa, Dr. Lucia Hawthorne, chairman of the department of speech communication and theatre arts, and a former student under the retiring professor, said, "Playwright, counselor, friend, and dedicated teacher, Arthur Lamb, we love, admire, and respect you. You have imprinted your memory in the very fibre of Morgan State College and it will never be erased."

Provident OK

A nurse called the AFRO Thursday night to report, "The beds here at Provident Hospital are full, the first time in the new location. We think this is good news. We think it says that citizens still have faith in Provident. What with all the bad news, we think some good news should be told."

Baltimore NAACP head volunteers

The Department of Juvenile Services has enlisted two distinguished volunteers for its program with youthful first offenders and probationers.

They are Mrs. Enolia Mc Millan, Baltimore NAACP branch head and retired school teacher, and Mrs. Zerita Skates, a public school teacher. Both women recently finished a training course for the program and are currently tutoring youth in need of help.

The Juvenile Services Department reports it needs volunteers for this program and persons interested may contact 523-8503 or 523-8504 for further information.

$28,000 director to be named

The new executive director of the Governor's Commission on the Structure and Governance of Education should be appointed during the next two weeks.

The director, whose salary is in the $28,000 a year range, may not be a Marylander, Commissioners agreed at their last meeting.

Some 175 persons have made application for the job but the choice has been narrowed down to five candidates.

A screening committee of commissioners will review the applications of the five candidates and make a recommendation to the full commission.

Leonard Rosenberg, new chairman of the Commission, held his first meeting with the group on Tuesday. Mr. Rosenberg replaced James Rouse as chairman.
