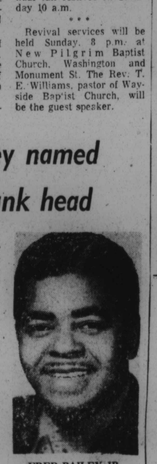
Fred Bailey named Calvert bank head



FRED BAILEY JR.

Frederick A. Bailey Jr. has been named manager of Maryland National Bank's Calvert Office, located at Howard and Saratoga Sts. in downtown Baltimore. He hd manager of the City Hall Office, 22 N Calbert St., since it opened in 1963.

Named assistant vice president in 1972, Bailey has been with the bank seven years, starting as an administrative trainee in 1966 and promoted to branch officer in 1969.

Active in civic affairs, Bailey was loaned by the bank to serve as co-director of the 1973 Baltimore City Fair.

His voice is known to listeners to WBJO-FM, the Community College of Baltimore's radio station, as a jazz expert, and his interest in public speaking has led to many assignments as master of ceremonies and spokesman at community functions.

He has been an advisor to the board of directors of the Left Bank Jazz Society chapter at the Maryland House of Correction at Jessup, and is a part officer of the Howard Park Civic Organization and the Howard Park School PTA.

Bailey was born in Baltimore and is a graduate of Carver Vocational Technical High School and LaSalle Extension University.

Aid society offering Yule card

The Parents Auxiliary of the Maryland Children's Aid Society is offering for sale an original Christmas card as its first fund raising endeavor.

The card is taken from a water color which was discovered in the archives of the Maryland Children's Aid Society 12 years ago, painted by an unknown artist. It is believed to be as old as the agency itself, 61 years.

It Just Wasn't Like Home 10 Days In The Soviet Union

By Frances Murphy

(This is the second in a series of articles on the Union of Soviet Socialist Republic by publishers of black newspapers in the United States who visited the country Sept. 27-Oct. 7.)

U.S.S.R. — Water you couldn't drink, phones you had difficulty using and televisions that seldom had programs you wanted to watch.

These were some of the problems encountered by publishers of black newspapers who toured two republics in the Soviet Union, Sept. 27-Oct. 7. The group was guest of the Board of the Union of Soviet Journalists.

The water was not only brown but smelly as it came out of the faucets at the Hotel Europeiskaya in Leningrad where my hotel suite included a guilded piano, dining room table, long entrance hall and separate room for bathing. (This was the only city where the water was bad.)

The men in our delegation laughed when we said we couldn't bathe in the water but they finally admitted we were taking a chance either to brush our teeth or much less drink the water.

Here I thanked our U.S.A. stars for Listerine, antiseptic soap, and those little antiseptic skin towelettes I had casually thrown in my bag at the last minute.

The Phones

Howard Woods, of the St. Louis Sentinel, just wanted to call his office to do his radio broadcast live — evidently something not done every day—but he eventually learned the system.

His greatest difficulty was getting an operator to first accept the call; second, charge it to his office phone, and finally, to get the call through.

In Tashkent, Uhzb., the telephone again proved to be a stopper. Delegation members found that in order to call the U.S.A. they had to leave the hotel room and place the call in the lobby, get Soviet money to pay for it and then wait.

Television

There is no such thing as Cable TV in the Soviet Union and at no time did I see more than two different programs on the television set at one time.

During our visit to the main sending television station in Moscow, we saw a large amount of updated equipment, hundreds of people a large number of studios but no one was producing a show. We were told they were "getting ready."

Coat-Checking

Our delegation learned to leave on the table such items as chewing gum, pens, small bottles of perfume, to say, "thank you," for the good service we received.

We left in our rooms pantyhose, small packages of tissue, toilet paper (do take your own), lipstick and nail polish.

Traffic

People traffic replaced automobile traffic in most cities we visited.

Yes, there were plenty of cars but there were more people walking and the majority of the people wore comfortable shoes, both men and women — and they looked good and dressed well.

Yes, we saw some platform shoes but not many — some mini skirts here and there — and some luxury cars. But most drove the small sedans.

Policemen directed the traffic with what looked like night sticks which glowed at night. Our driver stopped abruptly one night when a policeman just pointed the stick at us. We later found out that we had been speeding, knew it and quietly accepted the reprimand.

No Chiefs?

One thing you say about the Soviets: when they plan something, they plan it well, but one small suggested deviation from the plan can throw the whole Soviet host into confusion.

We had been in Moscow a couple of days and were going to take an all-night train ride to Leningrad. We felt it might be a good idea to leave some of our baggage in the hotel check room.

We went to the desk clerk in the Hotel Rossiya and planned to leave one bag belonging to Mrs. Lenora Carter, of the Houston Forward Times and a briefcase belonging to me.

First, the checker said "no." Here, circus, television studios and all government buildings like museums, etc., you must check your coat.

This is understandable in Russia where it is extremely cold in the winter but on our trip south to Tashkent (which has warm weather like Florida), the same procedure was followed.

In most museum buildings not only did we have to stop and check our coats, but we also had to put on booties over our shoes.

Tipping

No one accepted a tip, not the hotel maid, the porter or the waiters.

our guide tried to explain. The answer was still no.

Then some of our hosts explained. Still no. Before it was all over the hote manager, the floor manager, the checkers and our guide were all in a huddle. To no avail, the answer to me was no. Because...

It is against the rules. We don't check briefcases. They're not locked. It just isn't done.

Finally, Mrs. Carter was allowed to leave her bag. We learned then that once the plans are made it's hard to change the rules.

The Borders

Americans have gotten used to opening their suitcases, their pocketbooks, etc., to have them checked since the scare of planes being highjacked.

But you don't realize how far this has gone until you leave the U.S.A. for another country. In the good "ole" U.S.A. your bags are searched in the airport an attendant double-checks your ticket, the stewardess again checks your boarding pass when you get on the plane and finally you sit in a seat where you are again told that you don't put anything in the overhead luggage rack, put everything under the seat.

Once in the U.S.S.R. you forget all about this type of checking. The Soviets carry everything on the plane, including animals. They put them in the luggage racks over the head. There are no regulations that say bags must fit under their seats. And no one checked our baggage as we entered and left the plane.

As we entered the U.S.S.R. in the Moscow Airport we did have to fill out a declaration form saying how much money we were bringing into the country. That same type of form had to be filled out when we again returned to the United States.

Jetlag

We had heard about jetlag but with all my traveling I had never experienced it. Arriving in Moscow at night we all ate dinner and went to bed. Most awoke a bit refreshed the next day although tired.

Coming home it was another thing. Jetlag really took hold. And for me it took almost three days before I could function normally. But the trip was worth all the inconveniences because the people were so warm and friendly.

Dr. James H. N. Waring, famed educator, buried

(See Editorial)

James H. N. Waring, 83, who retired in 1965 after serving for 41 years as principal of Downingtown (Pa.) Industrial School died at Veterans' Hospital in Coatesville, Pa. He had suffered a long illness attributed to a heart ailment.

Mr. Waring who succeeded his father, Dr. James H. N. Waring Sr. as principal at the Downingtown school, was born in Washington on Jan. 17, 1890.

He attended the public schools in Washington before he enrolled in New York University. He was graduated from Harvard University with an A.B. degree in 1913. He served overseas as a lieutenant of the 362 Infantry in WWI.

He was assistant Professor of German at Howard University until the death of his father when he took the Downingtown position. He was a founding member of the Mu Lambda Chapter of Alpha Phi Alpha at Howard U. by whom he was honored on the day of his death.

He was a member of the board of trustees of Freedom Foundation, Valley Forge, Pa.; was a member of the board of Children Services of Pennsylvania. He also served as an elder in Central Presbyterian Church in Downingtown where his funeral was held on Tuesday Oct. 30. Burial took place in West Chester, Pa.

He was married to the late Miss Virginia L. R. Ruffin. He is survived by his sister, Mrs. Dorothy Waring Hoyard who resides in the Van Ness Apartments in Washington, D.C. and a number of nieces and nephews, one of whom is Simeon Booker, of the Washington Bureau, Johnson Publishing Company.

Senior citizens lunch program at Madison Y

The Young Women's Christian Association (YWCA) at 1912 Madison Ave, will be a site for the "Eating Together in Baltimore" luncheon program for senior citizens, beginning October 29 at 12 noon. Fee for a complete luncheon will be only 25 cents per person.

A typical lunch will consist of potato soup, baked ham, candied sweet potatoes, kale, bread and butter, a brownie, and coffee, tea or sanka.

Lunches will be served five days per week at noon. Older people are encouraged to become regular participants in the program so that they can make new friends and find activities for enjoyment. Reservations for meals must be made prior to attendance by calling the Luncheon Club Program, YWCA, 669-1881.

Reservations for the week beginning October 29 must be made by October 25. Reserveations for the succeeding weeks must be made by Wednesday of the week preceding participation.

The "Eating Together" program is under the direction of the director of the Division of Nutrition Services, Health Department, city of Baltimore. The program is being implemented in senior centers in public housing, churches and the YWCA, concentrating on areas where many older people live. The "West Center City Area," where the Madison Avenue YWCA is located, has a population of 17,000 with 2,100 persons over 60 years of age. The Madison Avenue YWCA Center can accommodate 50 to 100 persons. The Health Department plans to provide lunches for 500 people when in full operation.

Funded through Title 7, Older Americans Act, Nutrition Program for the Elderly, the luncheon programs now beginning are first in a projected long range program.

For information or to make reservations, senior citizens should call the YWCA, 669-1881.

Loyola awarded $100,000

Loyola College, Baltimore, has received a gift of $100,000 from the Haskins and Sells Foundation. The gift is in memory of the late Charles C. Croggon, a former partner in the international firm of certified public accountants who served in the Baltimore office of that firm since 1915.

Towson YMCA registration

People with time on their hands and nothing to do with it, or those who want to learn or perfect a skill, can contact Towson branch YMCA this week for fall and winter program information and registration forms.

A broad range of activities are planned for people of all ages and talents, according to Vernon A. Sevier, branch executive director.

Towson branch YMCA offers courses in swim instruction, physical fitness, investing, creative dramatics, jiu-jitsu, ballet, karate, yoga, art, skiing, piano, sewing and many more interesting and useful activities.

For program information, or to register, contact Towson branch YMCA, 823-8370.

The association is a participating United Fund agency.
