BANKAMERICARD Two Guys Just Say... "Charge it!" master charge

Ga. house trailer murder involves Maryland man

By Jane Shoemaker

DONALSONVILLE, Ga. (UPI) — The state's star witness testified Tuesday that George Dungee, one of three men charged with murdering a farm family, asked to shoot Mary Alday after he and another defendant raped her.

Billy Isaacs, 16, of Parkville, Md., whose testimony helped convict his brother last week, said Dungee, 36, of Baltimore, pumped two shots into the woman's nude body and "was ready to shoot her a third time when we hollered to him and said "that's enough."

Isaacs, who testified for 50 minutes and underwent extensive cross-examination, was the last state witness.

The defense rested without putting anyone on the stand, and prosecution and defense attorneys began closing arguments, indicating the two-day-old case would go to a jury Tuesday night.

Dungee, Carl Isaacs, 19, and Wayne Carl Coleman, 26, were charged with systematically killing Ned Alday, three of his sons, a brother and the wife of one of the sons last May 15.

Billy Isaacs, who denied he made a deal with the prosecution in pleading guilty to lesser charges, repeated much of his testimony of last week when his brother was sentenced to death.

He said Dungee was sitting in their car outside the trailer home when the first three men were killed with a bullet in the back of the head.

He said Dungee was ordered to guard Mary in the bathroom when the remaining two were murdered so "Mary Alday would not see what was happening."

They then took the woman, bound and blindfolded, to a wooded area several miles away where both Carl Isaacs and Dungee raped her, Billy said.

She was lying on the ground, he testified, when "Carl pulled her up. He gave her to Wayne Coleman and gave Wayne Coleman his gun and told him to shoot her.

"George Dungee said, 'What about me?' Wayne Coleman shook his shoulders like he didn't care. So he gave the pistol to George Dungee. George Dungee with a .22 caliber pistol took Mary Alday away from the car, made her lay face down and shot her twice. He was ready to shoot her a third time when we hollered to him and said that was enough."

Prosecutor Peter Zack Geer, a nephew of superior court Judge Walter I. Geer and a former lieutenant governor, stood up after the youth completed his testimony and said the state rested. Geer did not introduce a confession he said Dungee had made to officers after his arrest.

Much of the earlier testimony death with technical points, including the capture of the accused men, identification of fingerprints and a description of the violence done to the victim.

The defense rested without putting anyone on the stand and attorneys gave their closing arguments. The jury was charged and told to return at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday to begin deliberations.

DONALSONVILLE, Ga. (UPI) — George Dungee, 36-year-old fugitive from a Baltimore, Md., prison, was convicted of six counts of murder and sentenced to death Wednesday in the mass slaying of a South Georgia farm family.

Dungee, a slightly built black with bulging eyes, was the second suspect tried for murder in the case, and the second to draw the death penalty.

The first was 19-year-old Carl Isaacs of Parkville, Md. both Isaacs and Dungee were convicted on the testimony of Isaacs' 16-year-old brother, Billy, who was present when the May 15 slayings took place. Billy Isaacs turned state's evidence after pleading guilty to lesser charges of armed robbery and burglary. He was sentenced to 40 years.

The fourth and final suspect in the case, Wayne Coleman, 26, a half brother of the Isaacs, and also of Parkville, Md., will be tried next week.

The Superior Court jury of 11 whites and one black deliberated just 55 minutes in finding Dungee guilty. It on the sentence and retired to deliberate turned one hour and 57 minutes later with the squad group Dungee and Carl Isaacs are under sentence to die Feb. 15, but appeals will hold up execution of the sentences.

Md. blacks complacent, says professor

"Today the Maryland black stands proudly boasting of gains which are in fact tokens, while the mainstream social system remains unchanged and the real status of the black remains stagnant."

• • •

This quote is taken from an article on "The Socio-Legal Status of the Negro in Maryland" by Franklin C. Showell, executive director of the Maryland State Commission on Negro History and Culture.

• • •

The article appears in the University of Maryland Law Forum for the fall semester.

• • •

Mr. Showell states that "Maryland's social environment is deceiving; the surface relationship between blacks and whites seems cordial.

• • •

"Everywhere society seems integrated but in fact little has changed in either structure or attitude from the days Maryland had 200,000 black slaves. Today, it has almost 750,000 black citizens whose status is as untenable as the quasi-free Negro of the antebellum period, little better and in some cases worse than their enslaved forebears."

Mr. Showell, a Morgan State College assistant professor of history, also states: "Maryland blacks must discard their illusions and complacency and rediscover their unique and historic aggressiveness. Together, black and white, we must develop a truly open society in a "free state."

Mr. Showell, a graduate of Morgan State College, has done graduate study at the Johns Hopkins University and the University of Maryland at College Park. He is a doctoral candidate at St. Mary's University in Baltimore. He is the author of several articles and is presently writing a book.

Dobson new trial motion Tuesday

SHERMAN DOBSON

Sherman W. Dobson, 20, who was convicted on Dec. 11 of kidnapping and robbing Stepehen A. Brown on June 18 and using a gun in that crime of violence, will appear in Criminal Court part two on Tuesday, 10 a.m. before Judge Robert B. Watts to ask for a new trial.

Dobson, the son of the Rev. Harold Dobson and Mrs. Mildred Dobson, went on trial Nov. 19 for first degree murder of Maryland House of Delegate James Aubrey (Turk) Scott.

The jury found him not guilty on the murder charge.

However, defense attorneys Gerald A. Smith and Kenneth Johnson filed a motion for a new trial on Dec. 13 because Dobson was found guilty of kidnapping and robbery.

After Judge Watts hears from defense attorneys as to why they think their client should be granted a new trial, he will announce if Dobson will receive a new trial.

In the motions for a new trial filed Dec. 13, 1973 in Criminal Court, the attorneys stated the jury verdicts were against the evidence.

Attorneys Johnson and Smith also contend the verdicts were against the weight of evidence and the law.

They also state, the court erred in permitting Stephen Brown, over objections, to identify the defendant as his assailant during the course of trial, as said identification was so impermissably tainted as to deny defendant due process of law.

The attorneys said, "The court erred in admitting into evidence, over the objection of defendant, the items allegedly seized by police authorities during the course of an illegal 'search' of the premises known as 3603 Ellamont Rd. on July 18 and July 19, 1973." (The defendant's home.)

According to the record, the question of the legality of the search of the home at 3603 Ellamont Rd. was a factual question for the jury.
