Joyce Ann Parks, a girl from Chattanooga, Tenn., who had come to Washington 8 years ago in search of a college education, things were finally starting to fall into place.

After spending six years in the city moving from job to job, she had begun to take steps toward her goal of gaining a college education.

Working during the day at Howard University as an accounting clerk, who handled student records, registration and other general clerical duties, Miss Parks also attended Federal City College at night where she majored in business administration.

In her second year she was elected vice president of the Phi Beta Lambda Society, a club for business majors at FCC.

• • •

In September, Miss Parks decided ot join Vista (Volunteers in Service to America) through the Philadelphia office and was assigned work with an organization called One America Inc., an educational consultant firm.

Under a Vista-One America Inc. project, Miss Parks was assigned to work in a program which deals with female ex-offenders on a one to one basis.

After completing her education, Miss Parks planned on returning to her Chattanooga home to live with her mother, Mrs. Johnnie Mae Parks. Her grandmother and three sisters also survive.

Matron guilty of beating man to death

Mrs. Janet R. Dent, 23-year-old mother of two children, was sentenced to 10 years in prison on Tuesday by Criminal Court Judge Basil A. Thomas for beating a 65-year-old man to death with a broom stick.

Mrs. Dent of the 200 block Lafayette Ave. was found guilty of killing I. V. Flower, a neighbor, on February 23.

According to court records, the matron's husband, Gerald Dent Jr., 27, was also convicted of manslaughter, but has not yet been sentenced.

Juveniles may face District Court trials

A proposal to try all crime suspects over age 16 in District Court was made by Police Commissioner Donald Pomerleau at a meeting on Nov. 26 at Police Headquarters.

Present were judges, city council members, public defenders and representatives from juvenile court.

The Pomerleau plan has been endorsed by City Comptroller Hyman A. Pressman.

In an AFRO interview he explained, "I have agreed with this proposal because I feel these younger people will be tried in court more effectively."

• • •

Robert Hilson, director of State Department Juvenile Services disagrees.

He told the AFRO, "I admit juvenile crime is increasing, however lowering the age to 16 for young offenders to be tried in District Court may add more damage than help to the crime situation."

He added, "This may solve the immediate problems but we must look beyond that."

Judge Robert Hammerman, who has presided in Juvenile Court for over 10 years told the AFRO, "I am opposed to any lowering of age for those juveniles to be tried in a higher court." At present, suspects are treated as juveniles up to age 18.

Judge Hammerman explained, "We already have enough safeguards that would protect those juveniles of lesser crime and place those of more criminal acts in a higher court. So we don't need this change."

He added, present laws provide even 16-year-olds are tried as adults if convicted of felonies which carry a capital punishment or life imprisonment.

Comptroller Pressman intends to amplify the Pomerleau plan.

He has devised a new system for detention camps that would house juveniles not tried in District Court.

He explained that the new system will place the camps into three separate categories, classes one, two and three.

Class one would be for those with minor offenses or misdemeanors.

Class two would hold persons with crimes lesser than felonies or violent acts.

Class three would serve as maximum security for persons who have committed violent crimes or felonies.

All three centers would be equipped with schools to teach skills and trades.

Mr. Pressman states, "I feel because we've separated these centers and provided schools for training, we'll have more self-relying people."

• • •

Juveniles who improve with time would move on to centers with less security until their actual release.

Each detention center would be built in barrack style and those living in the complexes would be responsible for cleaning and maintenance.

Location sites for the camps would be in three areas of Maryland.

Class one would be built just outside Baltimore City.

Class two would be located between the outer city and Western Maryland and class three built somewhere in Western Maryland.

• • •

Commenting on this system, Mr. Hilson states, "Incarceration is not a deterrent for juvenile crimes."

Judge Hammerman also comments, "I cannot see how these detention centers will serve any useful purpose."

Mr. Pressman has appointed an ad hoc committee on crime to further work with his proposals.

The committee is comprised of 25 people from business, industry and community organizations.

Wade Poole, former deputy police commissioner is chairman of the committee and Harry D. Kaufman, former Jail Board president serves as co-chairman.

LT.-COL. BORDES HARTLEY, executive officer and chief of administrative services for U.S. Kirk Army Hospital, has been admitted to membership in the American College of Hospital Administrators, a prestigious organization.

Youth, 18, charged in 3 city slayings

A South Baltimore youth was arrested early Wednesday and charged with three murders, two of which occurred the same night in different locations.

Police state Leroy Bruson, 18, 3400 block Childs Ct., and another youth, Kevin E. Owens, 18, also of 3400 block Childs Ct., are charged with Thanksgiving eve murder of taxi cab driver, Merrill L. Tarbert, 41, in South Baltimore.

Homicide records show Bruson is also charged with killing (during the night Cleveland Johnson, 54, a tavern owner, during an argument over potato chips in Mr. Johnson's tavern located in the 500 block N. Pulaski St.

• • •

Bruson, detectives told the AFRO, is also charged in the Dec. 3 slaying of Clarence Witherspoon Jr., 21, 1000 block Lafayette Ct. in an argument on the selection of juke box records.

Police claim Witherspoon's father, Clarence Witherspoon Sr., who stepped in the argument as a peacemaker was shot and wounded in the struggle which occurred outside Paul's Bar in the 3300 block Remley St.
