Quiet winter evenings

By Marie P. Cooke

More and more people are staying home these days (nights, too). Perhaps it's course the current economic situation that's keeping us off the streets, highways, out of nightclubs and is preventing weekend travelers from doing their thing.

Remember the time when you just couldn't wait for Friday night to roll around... Saturday and Sunday night? We now find ourselves spending quiet winter evenings at home with love ones and close friends. Many of us are adapting totally new lifestyles.

Fashion designers are taking heed to the new stay-at-home trend. They are showing more and more loungewear, long robes, dress-up pajamas and very sexy nightwear. They all blend perfectly with the atmosphere.

Food has its part in the trend, too. Wine, brandy and liqueur are popular these days ... they help set the mood.

One drink I like to fix for such evenings is Brandy Collins. Served in an out-size brandy sniffer or frosted glass, it surely helps make staying at home a gratifying experience.

Brandy Collins

8 oz. (1 cup) California brandy

2 tablespoons honey or sugar

¼ cup lemon juice

Ice

Sparkling water

Shake or stir brandy, honey (or sugar) and lemon juice together. Pour over ice in 4 (8 oz.) glasses. Fill with chilled sparkling water, stir gently. Makes 4 servings.
