—City playground

The cost of such special patrols traditionally has been charged to the recreation budget rather than the police department and would save $100,523.

— Not opening 24 summer playground programs throughout the city to save $81,000.

— Halting activities at city swimming pools and ice rinks a week sooner than has been the practice.

— Avoiding filling vacant positions at the city zoo, although this will result in lower quality animal care and a lower level of cleanliness at a time when the city is trying to increase the zoo's attendance.

— Requiring 1,397 Little League and other baseball, boys and girls basketball, soccer and softball teams to pay the fees for umpires and referees now paid for by the city.

This would mean a savings of $50,290 but it also means that only the larger, wealthier leagues can pay for umpires and referees in order to participate.

— Closing 18 night centers for basketball leagues that now are open in public schools for three hours most weekday evenings from November to March.

— Ending swimming programs provided in public schools during the winter.

— Stopping all city Bureau of Recreation participation in weekend and after-hours programs and special events.

This cutback as well as the night center and swimming programs would save $80,000.

— Reducing summer outdoor concerts by 25 percent, saving $34,603.

— Cutting the department's labor force by 50 employees, causing a decrease in the frequency with which the grass in city parks is cut, flower beds are cared for and the marking of athletic fields.

A savings of $570,000.

— Cutting of city golf courses grass to two days week, resulting in poorer playing conditions and later a loss of money.

Tawney told the AFRO that the proposed cutbacks would not be limited to one particular section of the city but would be "equally shared by everyone.

"In just the closing of the 18 night centers alone we've got closings at Lemmel, Chinquapin and several schools in the Francis Scott Key bridge area in South Baltimore," he said. "So the cutbacks will be equally shared."

But Hyman Pressman, city comptroller, reacted angrily to the cutbacks stating they were "absolutely unacceptable."

"The people won't stand for this," he said. "The proposed budget cuts for the department might be just a preview of even worse things to come."

Pressman, however, could not offer any alternatives to Tawney's proposal, simply saying "It's an interesting question."

Mayor William Donald Schaefer and Walter S. Orlinsky, the city council president, applauded Tawney's action, praising his abilities as an administrator, stressing he should not be blamed for the program cutbacks.

"He's one of the best managers in the city," Schaefer told reporters. "Some very substantial cuts are being projected for the Recreation and Parks department to bring its budget down from $26.9 million to $26 million."

"These are things that have to be done to maintain the $5.99 tax rate, he continued. "We can't expect to continue the same level of services."

Orlinsky, while praising Tawney, criticized the Board of Estimates policy of keeping its budget debating sessions closed to the public, stating that Tawney's budget presentation being revealed to the public was "a perfectly good example of why these meetings ought to be open to the public."

Hearings set on taxi licenses

ANNAPOLIS — Hearings are expected to be held March 31 on a bill that would permit cab drivers in Baltimore to obtain licenses.

The hearings are to be held in the Baltimore City Delegation Room, room 310 at 9 a.m. in the Lowe House Building.

The bill, sponsored by Del. Arthur Murphy, D-Baltimore, would transfer the taxi business from the Public Service Commission to the Motor Vehicle Administration so drivers can obtain licenses.

It had reached the House floor earlier this week but Del. Paul Wissengoff requested that the bill be ordered to the Baltimore City delegation for further study.

Legislative sources said Weissengoff is opposed to the bill and may try to fill it.

Del. Murphy said blacks in Baltimore have not been able to get taxi licenses since 1946.

He added the bill is designed to free the taxi business.

PHILADELPHIA — A predominantly black group has called for the impeachment of Mayor Frank L. Rizzo and a federal agency said it is opening an inquiry following Rizzo's call for an "ethnic rights" campaign.

agreement was just another indictment in the long battle with Hopkins over discrimination in patient care and employment.

The council and the Hospital and Health Care Union Local 1199E had filed a discrimination suit in May, 1976.

During the course of the investigation by the Human Relations Commission the council discovered that the Hopkins attorneys attempted to block the investigation.

Last week the council filed a formal complaint with the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Joseph Califano, charging that the hospital violated Title VI of the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

In the charge Rawlings asked that the hospital's federal aid be cut off.

—Escape try

Thomas was being transferred from the city jail to the Maryland Penitentiary with seven other inmates, according to jail officials.

He had just stepped out of the paddy wagon, officials said, and was preparing to serve a two-year sentence when he launched his escape attempt.

Seconds after shouting hall, the officials said, Davis fired the fatal shot (about 12:15 p.m.) that hit Thomas in the back.

Bradshaw went on to explain how Thomas was shaking after he was shot with blood coming out of his mouth.

Then, Bradshaw said, Davis put his foot on Thomas' head and pointed the gun toward it, "and then he grabbed him and threw him in the stretcher even though he was handcuffed."

Herbert Parker, deputy jail warden for security, gave a different account of the shooting during a press conference called about the incident.

Parker said that Thomas had "slipped his handcuffs" at the time of the escape and then threw a bag of clothes in Davis' face before he began his attempt to escape.

The deputy warden was asked if Thomas could have been stopped in another way without being fatally shot in the back.

"Based on the information that I have, I would imagine that it was handled as best it could have been," Parker said after a long pause. His tone was unemotional.

"The correctional officers have the authority to use firearms to prevent escape since the escape is a felony," Parker said.

At first, Parker said that Thomas "had made it out to the street" before was shot, but later he changed his statement and said that he did not "know whether he was inside the gate or not" before he was caught.

Thomas fell on the sidewalk about 30 feet from the entrance of the Penitentiary and was dead on arrival at Mercy Hospital with a bullet lodged in the left side of his back.

Jean Hinton, Thomas's mother, said she spoke with her son on the telephone Monday. She said he never mentioned a desire to escape.

Mrs. Hinton, 34, who is confined to a wheelchair because her legs were paralyzed from a car accident in 1963, said she was 14 when she gave birth to Thomas. She said he was reared by his grandparents and an aunt, adding that his father left years ago.

"He was in trouble a lot, but he was a kind boy," she said. "He was just good to us whenever he could be. He tried to go into the Job Corps, but because of his record they wouldn't take him."

Thomas had a total of 14 charges on which he had not yet stood trial. They included eight counts of assault and robbery, five handgun charges and one homicide charge, according to Parker. For those he was granted no bail.

David has been placed on a leave of absence with pay pending a police investigation of the incident.

Davis and Parker are black as was Thomas.

Funeral services for Ms. Everett were held Tuesday at the Powell Funeral Home. She is buried in Westview Memorial Park Cemetery.

Police stale Ms. Everett was discovered about 3:40 a.m. Friday morning after a witness flagged a passing patrol car and told police "You better come with me and check on my wife. I think she's dead. I know she is dead."

Police said they found Ms. Everett lying on her back on a bed dressed in a night gown and covered with a bed sheet and a blanket. Her right leg was crossed over the left leg.

Police said the boyfriend told detectives that he could not rouse the victim and went for his brother who found someone to summon the police.

Relatives told police Ms. Everett had been treated at University Hospital three weeks ago but did not know if she was taking any medication or was under a doctor's care.

Ms. Everett was born Jan. 9, 1950 in Baltimore, the daughter of the late Thurman and Mrs. Mazie Everett. She attended public schools here in the city.

She is survived by one uncle, Manssie Boone; one brother, Reginald Everett and two sisters, Mrs. Mildred White and Ms. Gail Everett.

AFRO Q & A

Q: I haven't heard anything about Dr. Benjamin Quarles, the famed historian, lately. Can you find out what he is doing now? J. B., Gilmore St.

A. Dr. Quarles is still serving in the capacity that he enjoys most, that of an historian. As a professor of history at Morgan State University, he teaches a graduate course about blacks in the ante-bellum years every other semester. This is his off semester.

Benjamin Quarles

Q: Ever since I arrived in Baltimore I have been puzzled about which Washington monument was the first one. Would you put my mind at ease and tell me which city was the first to build a monument for the first President, Baltimore or Washington? S.D., North Avenue.

A: Baltimore, of course. We have Chocolate City beat by 19 years. The cornerstone of Baltimore's edition was laid in 1815 and the statue was set in place in 1829. In Washington, D.C., the monument was built in 1848.

Q: Can you tell me what year the Maryland Minority Business Directory started and who is its founder? C. F., The Alameda.

A: Founder and publisher Cleveland C. Washington began the Directory in 1970 with 20 pages and approximately 1,500 listings. In eight years it has grown to its present 64 pages and a listing of more than 3,000 business persons and advertisers.

Q: I know Seattle Slew won the Preakness in Baltimore last year. Did he win the Triple Crown? If not, what horse was the last Triple Crown winner? What year was that? A.S., Cockeysville.

A: Yes, Seattle Slew did win the Triple Crown last year, which means he won the Belmont Stakes and the Kentucky Derby in addition to the Preakness. Secretariat was the last Triple Crown winner before that. He won in 1973.

Q: I'm curious to know what Earl Koger, who publishes The Good News, did before he started his newspaper. How large is his staff? M.R., Pimlico Road.

A: The baron of one of Baltimore's many small tabloids was in the insurance business as a broker before he ventured into the field of molding public opinion. He has only one other staff member, believe it or not.

Got a question about Baltimore or Baltimoreans, ask us. We'll give it our best shot or tell you who could possibly be of further aid.
