Baptist clergy action group announce '78 plans

By Elizabeth M. Oliver

Representatives of 45 Metropolitan Baltimore churches gathered Arpil 10 at the First Annual Scholarship Banquet sponsored by the Baptist Clergy in Action and, to standing applause of the 400 guests, announced the group's 1978 program.

Dr. Vaughn said membership is still open for volunteers to forward the "watch dog" program in education, food and clothing for the needy and "anything else for our people so they will have a better life."

Their non - partisan register - to - vote campaign begins soon.

Main speaker, Dr. Homer E. Favor, dean of Morgan's School of Urban Studies and Human Development, charged the organization with responsibility to speak out with eloquent voice for our people and "work out the human problems that face us today." He accented needs of teenagers and persons in trouble.

Playing Rev. Jesse Jackson, once on the national civil rights front "in beads and turtleneck," as a man now "in a three - piece suit," Dr. Favor expressed regret over Jackson's current role, "seeking to destroy your children and mine."

Favor stated, "The black church must discover means to save our youth. Feed the children. Don't curse them. There are no jobs. Education is in trouble. We must find a way to their survival."

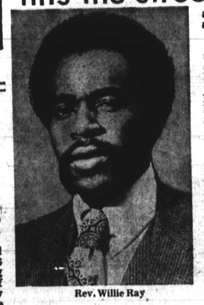
ATTEND THE CHURCH OF YOUR CHOICE

Redemmer's Palace 'hits the street'



Rev. Willie Ray

The Rev. Willie Ray, former associate pastor of Union Baptist Church, believes that a "few faithful teenagers are returning to church but the majority are still roaming the streets."

Since 1969, the 29-year-old minister has spent most of his time working with young people at Redeemer's Palace Inc.

Redeemer's Palace Inc., is now being housed at 220 West Saratoga St.

"It is a place that deals mainly with crime, alcohol and drug prevention and an outreach center for youth in the community," said Rev. Ray

Bible study, karate, music, modern dance and other activites are offered to youth daily from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m.

"We try to encourage youth to attend church, stay in school and assist in finding them jobs," said Rev. Ray.

The first site of Redeemer's Palace was in a three-story red brick building located at 811 West Saratoga St.

The old Pine Street police station was also formerly used as the outreach center.

According to Rev. Ray, the station is now being renovated and will soon be used as the new home of Redeemer's Palace Inc.

Spiritual activities such as Bible study, prayer and ministry in music are part of the activities held daily.

"Our doors are open to everyone and the approach used to guide the youth is love, concern and dedication to each individual in the program."

Young people who are involved in Redeemer's Palace usually leave the program with a greater social awareness than when they began.

Last Sunday Rev. Ray had dedication services at his new church home located on the second floor of Redeemer's Palace.

"Our services are very informal at the church and my deacon and trustee boards consist of young people."

Rev. Ray, a bachelor, says he will use his choir members and church band to attract youth and bring them back into the church.

Members of the choir and gospel band group are Michael Payne, Anthony Hayes, Leonard Johnson, Michael King, John Brooks, Phillip King and Maurice Delay.

The Fellowship Baptist Temple, where the Rev. L. M. Starks is pastor at 3602 Rogers Ave., recently had dedication services.

Rev. Starks stated, "As one recalls the 12 disciples, so can Fellowship Baptist Temple recall the 12 ministers seated on its rostrum who came to be a part of the dedication service."

Ministers seated on the rostrum were the Revs. Dr. James D. Ross, Parker Memorial Baptist Church and president of Progressive Baptist Convention of Maryland; L. M. Starks, pastor of Fellowship Baptist.

Minister speaks out

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second part of a three part series on new horizons for women in ministry by the Rev. Miss Agnes Alston. Rev. Miss Alston is associate pastor of Gillis Memorial Community Church and a counselor at Greenspring Junior High School.)

There are women today who would welcome a hidden service but are called to that personal witness which is the core of every message.

Another point, in considering Jesus's attitude toward women, is the fact that he talked with them on questions of theology.

John's gospel records a long private theological conversation of Jesus's with a woman he was meeting for the first time, one of another race. He initiated it, and when his disciples returned, they were dumbfounded to find that he had been talking with a foriegn woman who, moreover, had had a series of husbands.

The woman left with a mission to her city. She did what so many of us, both male and female are afraid to do, too coward to do.

She went back to the city of Sychar where she had made a mess of her life. There and there she begins to walk in the newness of life. In the joy of her amazing discovery she forgets her errand. She is no longer interested in the water of Jacob's well. Therefore, she leaves her pitcher to hurry to the city to tell its inhabitants to come see a man, which told me all things that ever I did: Is not he the Christ?

The results of her message: "Many believed in him because of the word of this woman. Somehow, when even the most unpromising become sure of God, they have that to share for which all the world dimly longs."

The last point in consideration is the most important. All four gospels make clear that women were the last at the cross and the first witnesses of the resurrection.

It was to them that the good news was given. "Be not afraid, Go tell my brethern that they go into Galilee and there shall they see me. (Matt. 28:10). "But go your way, tell his disciples and Peter that he goeth before you into Galilee: there shall ye see him, as he said unto you. (Mark 16:7). "Touch me not; for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but Go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend to my father, and your father; and to my God, and your God. (John 20:17).

"He is not here, but is risen." (Luke 24:16). Remember, it was to the men that Jesus said, "The son of man be delivered into the hands of sinful men, and be crucified, and the third day rise again."

But why should women have been the first witnesses?

I must agree with M. Madeline Southard, foundr of the American Association of women ministers, that Jesus knew had women not been the first witnesses, we should probably never have known that they were witnesses at all.

In any case, the news of Jesus' triumph over death, which is the root of all Christian preaching, was first carried by women to the world.

I ask you, do women need a further charter for the proclamation now? In the Acts of the Apostles (1:14). After ten days of persistent prayer, the Holy Spirit descended, in order that the followers of Jesus might have power to proclaim his word and do his work.

Women received this spirit and spoke under the same powerful influence that was moving men.

Moreover, this was in fulfillment of prophecy that included both sexes: Acts 2:17 - 18." And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh: and your sons and your daughtes shall prophesy, and your young men shall see vision and your old men shall dream dreams: And on my servants and on my handmaidens I will pour out in those days of my spirit; and they shall prophesy."

Many people would define "prophesy" as the prediction of future events, but the word has a wider connotation in the New Testament. It refers to any inspred utterance which builds p the church. Ideally, isn't that what preaching is all about?

Today, there are thousands of women who have sensed the call of God in their innormost beings and have responded by entering the largely uncharted territory of a man's profession, the ministry. A ministry whose encounters to transform the face of traditional American religion.

Some years ago, I met the Rev. Druecillar Fordham, a black woman who pastored Harlem's only Southern Baptist Congregation, Christ Temple Church.

She gracefully shared some of her early encounters. She said that she had been asked to participate in a Good Friday service at another Harlme church. But she found when she arrived that the six male ministers who were also involved had decided to ignore her, apparently because they didn't approve of women preachers.

They didn't say a word to her in the waiting room outside the sanctuary. When the time came for the procession to the front of the church, they jumped ahead of her two-by - two, and she had to march up by herself.

Each of the seven pastors were assigned to speak on one of Jesus' last seven words as he died on the cross. Her word was the fourth word. "My God, My God, why hast thous forsaken me?"

Rev. Fordham said that when she stood on her feet, she surveyed the congregation for a moment. Then, in a clear decisive voice she began.

In those last few moments of severe pain and suffering on the cross, Jesus cried out to his Father in heaven, "why?" We know why Jesus died for us at Calvary, but let's apply that word "why" to our onw lives.

Ask yourselves — you who claim to be Christians - why do you hate people? WHY DO YOU DO SOME OF THE SHAME FUL THINGS YOU DO. Why do you snub your fellowman? Why don't you recognize the authority of God in your lives and treat people as Jesus treated them?"

By the time she had finished, several of the heads on the bench behind her had dropped sheepishly. As she took er seat again, she heard one of the male minister mutter. "Man, I'm glad I don't have to preach behind her."

The physicalsresitance that Rev. Fordham encountered during that Good Friday service is symbolic of what is happening today in many denominations in this country.

The opposition often materialize the moment that a women reveals she has received a "call" to the ministry and continues as she tries to prove that her ministerial, abilities are equal to those of any of God's male servants.

If the female minister overcomes that opposition, she will find that prejudice against women preachers controls the thinking of many church officials and congregations. Even if she becomes and ordained and gets a church, resistance from the local male ministers may hinder her from operating her church effectively.
