Public Bus Service Due This Fall

Public bus service connecting Bowie State College with downtown Bowie and the Washington metropolitan area will be inaugurated this fall.

Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority officials say the new Metrobus route, approved by the Authority and the Prince George's County government, will go into effect with the opening of the New Carrollton Metro Station, now set for sometime in November.

There will be buses from the campus to the Belair Shopping Center in downtown Bowie and to New Carrollton every half hour during morning and evening rush hours and hourly during the rest of the day. At New Carrollton the bus will connect with the Washington Metrorail (subway) system.
