Bethel Players present 'Old Fashioned Mother'

Women of Bethel AME Church sponsored a three - act drama An Old Fashioned Mother by Walter B. Hare, at the Frederick Douglass High School in Baltimore City as a special Mother's Day Tribute. Oprah Winfrey, TV personality played the mother.

The play, first presented in 1916 in Tennessee, is both timeless and independent of special scale. It is a story of a selfless and triumphant mother's love, rooted in the ageless trust and faith of traditional christianity.

Harian Scott, organist, set the tone of the play in his background music as did the choir directed by Mrs. Vivian Carson. The play began with the choir rehearsing in "Aunt Deb's" living room.

The comic characters Jeremiah Gosling played by Claude A. Parker, Brother Jonah Quackenbush, played by George Dozier and the dynamic performances of Clani Lewis as the romantic poetess, Lawissy Loviny Custard evoked timely laughter at points when otherwise the audience might have been overcome with sadness.

Such sadness as was evidenced when John portrayed by Kevin Turner brought a starving tramp, played by Bernard Robeson to his mother's home; when Charley the elder son played by James Cobb, forced his mother to mortgage her home. Or, when John was sent to prison when all but his mother believed him guilty of murder; to see the aged mother on her knees scrubbing the floors in preparation to leaving her beloved home for the poor house.

The serious messages of the old - fashioned mother, portrayed by Oprah Winfrey were all presented and demonstrated her sense of theatre. Claude Parker, as Jeremiah, the country rube will have a outstanding performance and showed much of authentic character of the comedian.

A word of praise is due the pastor, the Rev. John R. Bryant, whose inspirational leadership motivated this group of church members to give of their time, after a full days work on their jobs, to undertake for many of them an entirely new experience in dramatic roles.

A feeling was actively present that each of the players, regardless of his or her role was seeing in this mother snapshots of his or her "mom."

Mrs. Alma Wyche Coleman with her flair for dramatics and her college experience as an outstanding member of the Hampton Players, showed her creative talent in assembling this group, most of them new members of Bethel, in such a rewarding performance.

The participants were so inspired that they intend to continue and increase their membership as a permanent organization of the church to be called "The Bethel Players."

A standing ovation expressed audience fulfillment and enjoyment.

Mrs. Wright is a former Professor of English at Morgan State and Howard Universities.

Deaconess board leader got 46 years is honored

WASHINGTON

A testimonial dinner at Nineteenth Street Baptist Church recently honored Mrs. Mary Etta Lyles Booker for 64 years service to the church, 37 years as church clerk and 46 years as chairman of the board of deaconesses. She is now elected its first vice chairman.

The tributary address was made by Judge Barrington D. Parker, following introduction by ... ness Loretta McClain.

Deaconess Lucille Smith presided. The biographical sketch of the honoree was presented by Deaconess Garnett Crossley.

Commendations were also expressed by the Rev. Jerry A. Moore Jr., pastor; Elvin Smith, deacon board chairman; Henderson Walker, trustee board chairman; Mrs. Ann Hayes, Sunday School Class 10; Deaconess Katherine Thomas, New Members Club; Dr. Arthur McKay, New York Avenue Church and Henry Booker, son, who gave the family tribute.

The invocation was said by Dr. Talbert O. Shaw. Soloists were Mrs. Inez Alderson and Deacon Walter A. Jackson Jr.

Mrs. Booker was cited by the Missionary Society as its woman-of-the-year in 1976. Now 89 years of age, she is the widow of the Rev. Henry J. Booker. He was ordained at Nineteenth Street Church and was minister at First Baptist in Warrenton, Va. from 1922 until his death in July 1942.

After his death, Mrs. Booker worked as book clerk in elementary schools in D.C., ending at Syphax, Richardson and Goding at age 70. Previous to her marriage in 1915 she had taught school in Quantico and Chesterbrook, Va.

Born in Alexandria, Va., Mrs. Booker was a 1908 graduate of Virginia State College.

Mrs. Fauntleroy, mother of judge

WASHINGTON

Mrs. Esther Mary Webb Fauntleroy, mother of Superior Court Judge John D. Fauntleroy, died Thursday May 17, at Howard University Hospital. She was 92.

Mrs. Fauntleroy was a member of Tabor Presbyterian Church and later Northeastern Presbyterian Church with in 30 years. She was a seamstress and often made clothing for her grandchildren, most of whom she helped to rear.

Mrs. Fauntleroy was born in Alexandria, Va. on Jan. 28, 1887 to John and Mildred Webb and attended Howell High School there. She was married in 1912 to Frederick D. Fauntleroy, a contractor and builder.

The family lived for awhile in Hampton, Va. before moving to Washington in 1917. They had three children; John D. Fauntleroy, Mrs. Anelta Brown and Frederick W. Fauntleroy, who died in 1973.

MOURNED — Mrs. Esther W. Fauntleroy died last week at age 92. She was the mother of Superior Court Judge John D. Fauntleroy and Mrs. Anelta Brown.

After the death of her husband in 1938, Mrs. Fauntleroy resumed her seamstress career to support her children. They all achieved their career goals due to her unfailing efforts.

Funeral services were held on Tuesday at the Northeastern Presbyterian Church with Rev. Shelton B. Waters presiding. Interment took place at Lincoln Memorial Cemetery.

Besides her son and daughter, survivors include seven grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

The grandchildren are Gretchen A. Roberts - Shorter, Sonya R. Simpkins, Phyllicia Fauntleroy, Jacqueline Barber, Stephanye Robert, John D. Fauntleroy Jr., and Frederick Fauntleroy. Also surviving are a daughter - in - law, Phyllis G. Fauntleroy and son - in - law, Bernard A. Roberts.

Dr. Miller named HU dean

Dr. Russell L. Miller Jr., associate professor of internal medicine and pharmacology at Howard University, has been named new dean of the College of Medicine. He succeeds Dr. Marion Mann, who will return to teaching after serving nine years as dean.

The 39 - year - old Miller has been a member of the Howard medical school faculty for the past five years and also serves as director of the clinical parmacology unit.
