

Ahmad Mousbah went to school abroad last year.

Thanks to the Russians, he is now a graduate P.L.O. terrorist.

This captured graduation certificate confirms intelligence reports that hundreds of P.L.O. terrorists are being trained near Moscow and on the Black Sea in Russia.

It's simple. The Mideast is full of oil. The West needs oil. The Russians need oil. The Russians are prepared to do something about it.

So while we sell billions of dollars of wheat to feed the Russians, they spend billions of rubles to feed the flames of unrest in the Mideast by training the P.L.O. in the art of killing.

Peace in the Mideast and plenty of oil for all? Not if the Russians and the P.L.O. can help it.

LET'S RECOGNIZE THE P.L.O. FOR EXACTLY WHAT IT IS.

Enthusiasm returned, Bears go for best record in 10 years

It has been a long time since e football attitude at Morgan ate has enjoyed such an beat character as currently ists on campus.

Student support of the olden Bears has remained nstant, despite seven years on-again, off-again per-rmance. But there has been othing over the past 10 easons to match today's nthusiasms at the Hillen Road chool.

It is this new atmosphere hat awaits Virginia State ollege when the Trojans ome in tomorrow (Saturday) fternoon for the 1 p.m. ickoff at Hughes Stadium.

The reason for this fresh onfidence is obvious.

Victories over the Trojans omorrow and the Howard niversity Bison will give the Bears nine straight wins after n opening game loss to Grambling in New York.

And looking back on that tiff at Yankee Stadium, Morgan supporters can sense that even that setback had its encouraging note.

The 28-18 defeat represented the most points the Bears had scored on their Louisianz rivals in the 10-year history of the Morgan-Grambling series.

Going into her last two contests of the regular schedule, Morgan shows a 7-1 record.

If coach Clarence Thomas can forestall the complacency that seems inevitable after victories over South Carolina State and Virginia Union, his Bears may wind up with a 9-1 log and certain of a post-season invitation from the NCAA.

Virginia State, however, is not a foe to be taken lightly.

The Trojans are saddled under a 6-3 record, and come in with a losing streak of two in a row.

But they fought defending Gold Bowl champion Virginia Union to a standstill before losing to a fourth-quarter field goal, 3-0.

And it was by a mere two points that they bowed to Norfolk State, 14-12, last Saturday.

Virginia Union and Norfolk are perennial powers in the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association...LACY.

Injury hex finally hits Morgan team

All reason, the Morgan Bears have overcome obstacles except for one occasion, that being their loss to Grambling.

Whether, tough defenses and potent offenses have all teamed up against the Bears, but they have been handled.

For this week's game with Virginia State at Hughes stadium, beginning at 1:30 p.m., a new problem has arisen for Morgan. It's a common one — injury.

Out for the remai der of the season with impending knee surgery is tailback Buddy Sharpe. Also hurting and uncertain about playing against the Trojans is wide receiver — kick returner Curtis Henderson.

Henderson has a 10.9 kick return average and is one of quarterback Darrell Coulter's favorite targets.

However, the visiting Trojans are not without injury problems of their own.

Virginia coach Tom Morris is lamenting the unsure status of his fullback, George Leonard, who has rushed for 674 yards this fall.

If Leonard plays, it is feared he will be severly handicaped by an ankle sprain suffered last week....SAM DAVIS.

BY THE WAY...

By Joe Black

Perhaps I am wrong, but for years I have harbored the belief that Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., Whitney Young, James Farmer, Roy Wilkins, and Rev. Leon Sullivan challenged the system so that Black Americans could enjoy the fruits of equal opportunity and justice. They had us Black Americans marching and singing "We shall overcome" and other freedom songs, as this nation was reminded that the slaves of yesteryear were now seeking a greater share of the "economic pie." But as I travel about the country this year, I get the feeling that the young, and not so young, think that the movement was to give Black people the right to remain ignorant and unemployed.

Too many of us are ignoring the terms inflation, recession, and high unemployment among Black youths. Instead of a concern for economic growth, I see, in my opinion, examples of Blacks moving backwards. I am talking about the hairstyles of corn-rows, plaits, and braids that are circling, adorning, or hanging from Black skulls. Yes, I do love myself and other Black people, but that does not blind me to the things that will impede the forward progress of Black Americans. I have no quarrel with the singers and entertainers who use these styles to add flair to their showmanship, but I am talking about those individuals who claim that they are followers because it is style or they are relating to their African sisters and brothers.

I recall that years ago the white man wanted us to plait our hair so that we could fit their labels of "pickaninnies"; thus, the Black female was anxious to reach her teenage years so that she could rid herself of the plaits and braids. Before someone attempts to rationalize and say that the generation gap is why I don't appreciate the hairstyles, please let him, or her, explain to me why the masses of African citizens aren't wearing their hair in those fashions except for special events. The African nations have adopted Western styles and developments as they endeavor to improve their socioeconomic status as world powers. And I admit that years ago African warriors fought with spears, blowguns, and wore their hair in braids. Today, they utilize modern shooting weapons and no longer wear their hair in braids. So why are so many of the Black athletes wearing their hair in braids? As a former athlete, it really disgusts me when I see Black American athletes with braids while their African competitors are wearing their hair in a short, natural style.

My young friends, are you making it easy for "the man" to keep so many of you on the unemployment rolls? Remember, employers can and will enforce a dress code.
