Heart attack fells well-known butcher

Roman "Romie" Brodie, popular Lexington Market butcher, is in Sinai Hospital under observation after suffering a heart attack early Monday morning.

His face at the Lentz meat stand long has been one of the most recognized by market patrons.

Son Roman Jr., 25, told the AFRO that he heard light moaning in his father's room at their Rubin Ave., home about 5 a.m., Monday, as the latter was dressing to leave for work.

Young Brodie called his mother, Mrs. Rosalyn Brodie, from her coffee-making chore, and she rushed to the room to find her husband experiencing chest pains.

He was taken to Sinai in an ambulance. Latest reports indicted Thursday morning that Brodie's condition is improved.
