Black Caucus takes aim at new legislative plan

By Juise Coleman

Ratification of the Congressional Black Caucus' (CBC) 97th legislative agenda, review of the 1981 communications action alert network plan, and support for the legislative and public policy agenda were the topics discussed at CBC meeting held Saturday Feb. 28.

The legislative agenda for 1981 includes defense against past legislative and public gains; offense of key legislative and public policy initiatives; and the organization of Blacks and coalitions in support of CBC priorities.

Legislation, networking, media programs, black families and fundraising are the tools which will be used to carry out the legislative plan.

The communications network plan is an effort by the CBC to gain access to the names of approximately one million black people on a central computer.

According to Walter E. Fauntroy, chairman of the campus, the names will be broken down into congressional districts as well as organizations so that "when the vote is needed we will be able to contact them swiftly."

Fauntroy, explained that the CBC should be able to contact its constituents as swiftly as the moral majority contacts its constituents.

The names in the computer, which according to Fauntroy will cost approximately $8,000, will be used only if the organization leaders agree to do so.

Fauntroy went on to describe the plan as a "simple, moral, intelligent plan we hope every Black can understand" and every Black can use to evaluate their leaders by.

He asked the leaders of the various organizations who attend the meeting to "on the basis of their knowledge" work with the caucus. He explained that they should help CBC shape and manage the agenda.

The budget was also discussed at the meeting. Fauntroy said that the caucus had accepted President Reagans challenge to anyone who could develop a better budget.

"We are going to come up with an alternative budget," he said.

According to Fauntroy, Reagan sees the problem of the world as being Russia and the solution as the military.

"We're saying no . . . The problems of the world do not lend themselves to military solutions," he said. He described the real problems of the world as "social, political and economic."

According to Congressman Parren Mitchell, who also attended the meeting, the caucus' budget, which will be available later this month is an effort "to take the Carter budget and shift it to the left, focusing on human resource programs" that are needed.

Mitchell explained that it will be at least two years to see anything productive or any impact on intlation. Even then "intlation will be reduced by only one percent," he said.

Another concern of the caucus was the media. More frequent press conferences were suggested to make the CBC more visible and let the "Black nation and the whole nation know that the CBC is not just a group of civil rights activists who happen to be in Congress . . ." Fauntroy said.

Congressman Mervyn Dymally (D.-Cal.), who was concerned with technology and money said that the conservatives won in the past election "because they were organized and had technology." He explained that the conservatives are "10 years ahead of us in technology."

Dymally continued by saying that conservatives have money and mentioned that most black organizations are non - profit.

Some groups represented at the meeting included the National Urban League, the NAACP, the National Education Association, churches, students organizations, communicators, fraternities, among many others.

In conclusion, Fauntroy asked those present to "give us a vote of confidence on the direction that we're headed . . . He received that vote.

Documentary debuts at CU

The Catholic University of America is sponsoring the showing of "Law and Order," produced by Frederick Wiseman, at the university's Nursing School Auditorium March 11 and 15 at 7:30 p.m.

The documentary by Wiseman, who has won several awards for his film portrayals of major American institutions, is based on a period of six weeks in which he accompanied members of the Kansas City (Mo.) Police force in the city's worse crime districts.

Wiseman stated in an article in Police Chief magazine that "I watched the cops doing some rotten things and some decent things, but what struck me wasn't so much police brutality' as the brutalities that people in the street were committing against one another."

Next he auditoned for Norman Lear and won a role in a projected remake of "The Little Rascals". The pilot didn't sell, but Gary was signed to a contract with Lear's Tandem Productions. Subsequently, he was featured in episodes of "The Jeffersons", "Good Times" and "America 2 Night". He became a star overnight with the premiere of "Diff'rent Strokes" in the fall of 1978.

As well as guesting on Johnny Carson's "Tonight Show", "Dinah!", "Mike Douglas" and other popular programs, he starred in his first movie for TV, "The Kid From Left Field", between TV seasons.

Now comes "On the Right Track" and another big step forward.

According to his mother, Sue Coleman, Gary doesn't feel like a star. "He just likes to do his own thing", she says. "So far, he still enjoys acting—except for the crowds and all those autographs. He has fun doing the rest of it".

As for his future, she says he really doesn't know yet what he wants to do. "I think he will stay in entertainment, but not necessarily acting. He may want to direct. He is interested in all the technical aspects—he's always asking questions of the cameramen, the sound men and all the others. I think he'll wait awhile, try it all and then decide".

Gary himself has been quoted as saying, "I'm not always going to be an actor. Maybe a director".

Asked the same question just as he was finishing his role in "On the Right Track", he responded: "The past, I know about. The future? I don't know about that. Maybe I'd like to be one of those space pilots, zooming through the planets. Now that would be fun".

"On the Right Track", stars Gary Coleman, Maureen Stapleton, Michael Lembeck, Lisa Eilbacher, Bill Russell, Herb Edelman and Norman Feil as "The Mayor".

Mayor's vandalism task force formed

Mayor William Donald Schaefer has appointed a task force to plan a campaign against vandalism.

Howard Walters of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. was appointed to head the task force. Walters said the group wants anti vandalism programs operating by September.

Daniel Lipstein, spokesman for the Mayor's Coordinating Council on Criminal Justice, said vandalism is not only ugly, it takes money away from programs and services to people that must be spent instead on repairing buildings.

"THE FORGOTTEN SCHOOLS OF MARYLAND, A LOOK FOR IN" IN ANNE ARUNDEL COUNTY (FORMERLY BAYSIDE BEACH ROAD PROPERTY) NOW BAYSIDE, MD.

Over One Hundred years ago, there existed two Schools in Rock Point, Anne Arundel County, Maryland (Now Bayside Beach). One of these Schools was for the educating of the whites while the second School was for the educating of the Colored residents.

Greenbury Johnson, a man of color, had purchased land in this part of the County, dated back to the year 1853. Looking ahead, into the distant future, he thought of his race and the education they would need were they to survive economically.

Seeing this need, Greenbury Johnson, upon his death bed, stipulated that a certain part of his estate would be used for the erection of a Colored School. While the School was being erected, Greenbury Johnson passed before completing the instrument of conveyance for the property.

His heirs; wife, Mary Johnson; two daughters, Ann Rebecca Hall and Mary Elizabeth Richards; one son, namely; Lemuel Johnson; carried out his interest by completing said instrument of conveyance to the Board of School Commissioners of Anne Arundel County on the 23rd day of January, Eighteen-Hundred Seventy-Four, before Elijah R. Arnold, the Justice of the Peace.

Mary Elizabeth Richards, who was married to Howard Richards, passed in April 1882. Eleanor Richards the daughter of Howard and Mary Elizabeth Richards married Hezekiah Manns and from this marriage six children was borned — namely Albert, Elizabeth, Rebecca, Lillie, Grace, and John Manns. Eleanor Richards Manns passed in July 1900.

Hezekiah Manns, remarried, subsequent to the death of his wife, Catherine Turner, who predeceased him. Of this marriage, they had one son, James Hezekiah Manns who died in August, 1931.

James Albert Manns, referred to in the Equity Proceedings as Albert Manns, married Josephine Sampson and died on July 6, 1961 in Baltimore City, leaving surviving him his widow, Namely: James Albert Manns Jr., Eleanor Purnell, Charles Edward Manns, Vernon Manns, Paul Manns, and Russell Manns, all living and of age.

Prior to his death, James Albert Manns Sr., was a member of Mount Zion United Methodist Church, Magothy, Maryland, also The Centennial United Methodist Church of Baltimore, Maryland.

All facts and documents concerning the above may be viewed and information had been written ... Mr. Charles Manns, the son of the late James Albert Manns Sr. and the great, great, great grandson of Greenbury Johnson, 1005 Rutland Avenue, Baltimore, Maryland 21205.
