Job options for women

Whether you're looking for your first full-time job after high school or a part-time job while school is still in session, the U.S. Department of Labor notes that the outlook for the 80's will be good in many job fields.

A booklet aimed for women jobseekers can be especially useful for career-novices. For your copy of Job Options for Women in 80's, write the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 20IJ, Pueblo, Colo 81009.

What is the job outlook for the 80's? Those born during the post-war "baby boom" will be the largest group of job-hunters. Many women in this age group had great difficulty finding their first jobs during the 70's. And, although most are now employed, the competition for higher level jobs and promotions will continue to be stiff.

But good news for those born in the 60's. Low birth rates at that time will mean less competition and lower youth employment. However, the lower birth rates will also cause some job areas to shrink - like teaching. This will be counterbalanced by the increasing need to expand services for older people - like health care.

Young people out on their first job hunt can begin by making a list of what they do best, from fixing cars to babysitting, from a skill in music to a skill at mathematics or computers. Next, write down all of your job experiences, including volunteer work.

If you are under 18 years of age, see your guidance counselor to find out how to get a work permit.

And, if you don't have a social security number, call your local social security office to get information.

Then, begin making as many job contracts as you can - it's really a full-time job just finding employment. Start with friends, relatives, the classified ads, and call the personnel offices of large stores and companies.

State employment services are another good source. And, a number of states have employment resource directories for women - contact the state's commission on the status of women.

Finally, your educational attainment can help you land a good position. In general, college graduates are more likely to be employed and hold higher paying professional positions. However, the subject you major in may make a difference.

Graduates with degrees in science and mathematics usually have little difficulty finding jobs, while many humanities and education majors may find it extremely hard to find work in their field.

When you order a copy of Job Options for Women in the 80's you will also receive a free copy of the Consumer Information Catalog. Published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administration, the Catalog lists more than 200 free and low-cost booklets on employment, automibiles, energy, food and other consumer topics.

HATS OFF!!

This week's salute to Michael Henderson, 22-year-old football player at Morgan State University.

It is not for his gridiron performance that we select him, but for his marvelous baritone voice.

He was one of the soloists during the college's chapel service a Sunday ago, (Oct. 2), at Morgan Christian Center.

What a voice! It was outstanding in "If God Be For Us," and in the choir's rendition of "How Great Thou Art."

The 20 young people seemed to enjoy their singing, and director, Dr. Nathan Carter, was a sight to behold, first standing in front to direct them, then accompanying them at piano.

Cecelia Satterwhite's solo, "He Satisfies," was another treat. It was a special arrangement by Dr. Carter and Roberta Martin.

2nd generation

Henderson hails from Dallas, TX, is a senior majoring in business administration.

His parents, both educators, are Tillman and Diberna Henderson.

His father, a Morgan alumnus, played football here at the Baltimore college, back in the Fifties.

They have a daughter, Nancy, a freshman at Prairie View College (in Texas).

Dr. Force

Director of Morgan Christian Center is Dr. R. Douglas Force, a six-footer, whose confident voice keeps you hanging on every word.

In his sermon, entitled, "Ministry in Higher Education," he gave a learned discussion of the history of religions. He told the mostly student congregation that the chapel should be more than a church, an experience in learning for the entire college family.

Dr. Force is also the university chaplain. Rev. Andrea Diegel is chaplain on call.

Marion Sapin is assistant to the center director. Mrs. Susie Sykes is administrative secretary. Irvin Sutton is caretaker.

Assistant chapel choir director is Margaret Lindsay, the lady with a beautiful voice. Michael Spruill is organist. David Parker directs the Gospel Choir.

Open to all

Morgan Christian Center's Sunday services are open to all. We expected there would be standing room only, because we had not been to chapel service since our college days at Howard. Then chapel was compulsory.

Any one residing on Morgan campus, or in the area, will have a real experience if he worships at the Center.

Imagine hearing the Morgan choir, (or a portion thereof) for free!!

We were in attendance because Louise Murphy hosted the Couples' club, and asked members to begin the season there. She is altar attendant.

Seen in the audience, Mrs. Maggie Lane, the Baltimore Urban League staffer.

Also met Dr. Stella Hargett, MSU sociology prof.

Coming up: The Christian Center's third annual Christmas Candelight Service on Sunday, Dec. 6 at 7 p.m. All are welcome.

Continue nominations to this column's Hats Off Section.

Too few adults take time to congratulate our young people when they do well. Too many of us are quick to criticize them when they mess up. Hats off!!

Wed 50 years

John W. Williams Sr., and Thelma Hudgins were married Nov. 1, 1931.

On Sunday, they marked the event at Madison Ave. Presbyterian Church.

The Rev. Reginald Daniels officiated when they renewed their vows.

Mr. Williams is an elder in the church. His wife is a deaconess, president of the Ladies Guild and member of Arts and Crafts Class.

His hobby is reading. Hers is sewing. Both like to travel, look forward to European trip this summer.

Their secret for long marriage: "You have to give and take."

The Williamses live in the 2100 block of Druid Hill Ave. He retired recently after 38 years with Stainless Steel.

Present to witness the ceremony were their 11 children and their spouses, most of their 54 grandchildren and 9 great grandchildren.

7 generations

Mrs. Williamses's family has belonged to Madison Ave. for seven generations. Mrs. Williams joined as a child. He joined 30 years ago.

Her parents were Richard and Bertha Anderson Hudgins.

Grandparents were George and Ella Duffiap Anderson.

Following the church service, a reception with tributes, dinner and dancing at the Forum, with 265 well-wishers in attendance.

For the morning rededication, Mrs. Williams wore a beige dress, threaded with small roses and green leaves, and a burnt orange head piece with veil.

The reception gown, which she designed, was shocking pink satin, embroidered in white.

Mr. Williams was elegant in tuxedo. As they accompanied photo shows, they made a handsome couple.

The Bill Cummings combo played.

11 children

Mrs. Doris Jordan, the public school cafeteria manager; Mrs. Cynthia Thomas, Hopkins nurse; Mrs. Margaret Bowler, the Head Start teacher; John W. Williams Jr., an electrical technician; Mrs. Marie Miller, the caterer;

Also Mrs. Susie Lewis, Day Care Center owner; Richard and Carroll Williams, real estate brokers; Arthur (Chuck) Williams, school engineer; and Mrs. Caroline Johnson and Mrs. Deborah Williams, who are homemakers. Caroline and Carroll are twins).

Family friend here for the celebration was Mrs. Mary Gardner, Northampton, New Hampshire.

Among grandchildren here, Bonte Bowler, who is with a major industry in Providence, RI.

More people

Baltimore chapter of Chums Inc., joined 450 other members from 27 chapters for the group's 21st annual conclave, hosted by the Elizabeth City, N.C. chapter over the weekend.

Sessions were at the Omni Hotel in Norfolk, Va., overlooking the harbor, where plans are already underway to develop a harborplace similar to the one in Baltimore.

The group gave $5,000 to the United Negro College Fund, with Baltimore member, Bernice McDaniels, making the official presentation.

Another nice gesture: Instead of a luncheon speaker this year, the hostess chapter arranged for the three founders to give reflections and tell their hopes and dreams.

Chums was organized in Norfolk 35 years ago by Mary Barnes, Joyce Brown and Theodora Jackson Cora.

All were present to give intimate glimpses of the early days before national organization. Very inspiring.

Bus ride

Baltimore members, accompanied by spouses or escorts, who are called Chums, travelled to conclave by bus supplied by the black - owned Isadora Hall Co. of Glen Burnie.

The ride was smooth in both directions. The drivers were excellent. They were, Charles (Chuck) Johnson, a 5 - year employee, and Carroll Boone, a 31 - year employee.

Other Baltimore Chums, along with mates there: Christine Moore, (she's president); Otyce Froe, Blanche Beckham, Gwen Hilton, Ponjola Priest, Berniece Hutchins, Hermione Weaver, Betty Morton, Shirley Swafford, Loraine Brown, Myruce Bennett and Jerri Manuel.

Bill Jones

William Howard Jones, 77, who was eulogized on Thursday was a horse lover all his life.

Relatives recalled this week that shortly after leaving Douglass High, (then it was the old Colored High at Pa. and Dolphin), he moved to NY, and began work as a stable boy.

Until he became ill three years ago, he was active as trainer at race tracks all over the U.S., and in Candada. He was a member of the Horsemen's Club and a Prince Hall Mason.

He and his wife of 37 years, the former Annia Hill, lived for years in Elmont, NY.

The funeral was at the family home church, Berean Baptist, on Denmore Ave. in Pimlico.

In addition to his wife, surviving are five sisters, Mesdames Audrey Lee Jones, Lillian Luttrell, Bettye Lindsay and Frances Scott, all of Baltimore, and Mrs. Grace Anderson, E. Elmhurst, NY.

About people

Dr. Earl Kidwell, the eye doctor, was among U. of md. medical School faculty members who lectured in Germany last month.

His post card from Amsterdam tells of a side visit to a museum which he called "fantastic." He majored in art in college.

Here from California last week, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Calloway, wed a year ago.

He's the Oakland surgeon.

She is the former Marie Edwards Johnson of our town, now a San Francisco art instructor.

They were here for the opening of the travelling art exhibit, "Forever Free," the University of Md's Art Gallery in College Park.

This exhibit, featuring art by African-American Women from 1862-1980, includes works by Mrs. Calloway. It will be on view through Dec. 3.

Reunion

The Calloways visit meant reunion with longtime Baltimore friends and neighbors. They guested with Eliza Lindsay.

Fellow members of Links in the DC area hosted a party for them on Friday.

On Saturday, hometown friends who gathered to gree them at the Lindsay residence, included:

Messrs. and Mesdames William Griggs, Howard Collins, Ralph Smith, Melvin Hall,

Drs. and Mesdames Simon Carter, Curtis Adams, Eugene Byrd and son, Eric (By the way, the Byrds are subjects of one of Mrs. Calloways works on display here).

And, Wellington Ross, Herbert Coles and Clarence Smithea of D.C., Eula Watkins and Elizabeth Diggs.

Cuff note: Mrs. Calloway's mother, Ms. Marie Edwards, former Baltimorean, still resides in San Jose, CA, getting rave notices for her art work and she's a sprisely 80!

Years ago she became the first female elder of Grace Presbyterian Church, here in Baltimore. Then, the family lived on Mulberry St., and later on Lafayette Ave.

WED 50 YEARS — Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Williams Sr. observed their 50th anniversary on Nov. 1. For details see If You Ask Me.
