ROBERT MACK AND GRACE ZAC-CARDI: A photographic essay on the Clifton T. Perkins Hospital Center thru Jan. 29, 1984 at Baltimore Museum of

In the summer of 1981, Baltimore photographers Robert Mack and Grace Zaccardi took a series of striking photographs of patients at the Clifton T Perkins Hospital Center, Maryland' maximum security facility for the criminally insane. Men held in this facili ty have been tried and found to be not guilty by reason of insanity, but are considered dangerous either to themselves or others. Having won both the cooperation of Zaccardi produced a photographic essay that illustrates the complex social and human issues which make institutions like the Perkins Center so inaccessible and frightening for most people.

The photographers will give a Gallery
