Edwina Henry: Black beauty on Black Horizons

By Vashti McKenzie

Beauty is as beauty does and popular talk show "Black Horizons" will feature lots of it this Saturday, Jan. 14 at 7:30 on WBAL-TV.

1983 was a great year for black beaucaptured the Miss America title.

Edwina Henry is another black beauty, winner of the second annual Gentle-Treatment Model Search sponsored by Johnson's Products who'll share beauty secrets on "Black Horizons" Saturday. Chosen over 7,000 entrants, the Chicago native now living in Nassau, the Bahamas, is touted as being America's next Iman or Beverly Johnson.

Designated as the face of '84, she'll be appearing in national ads for Johnson Products and featured in beauty-fashion magazines for the coming year.

she's also intelligent. She plans to move y being appreciated in unexpected from the sunny environment of Nassau s this month and head for sunny California to attend San Francisco State majoring in Broadcast and minoring in Photography. Photography is a particular passion of this lithe beauty model as she feels this will be an invaluable asset to her career. She'll be able to work both sides of the camera, one enhancing the other.

> Henry has some pretty strong feelings about black women and in the fashion and beauty fields.

"I feel more doors will be opening for us now and you can expect more black women to be in very prominant positions now,", she said. "That old slogan "It's about time for us to get some beauty and no brains" is gone. Thank

Since winning the title on November 16, Henry's been on the go meeting with editors of newspapers and magazines She's scheduled for professional photography sessions in New York, and her life of commuting between Nassau

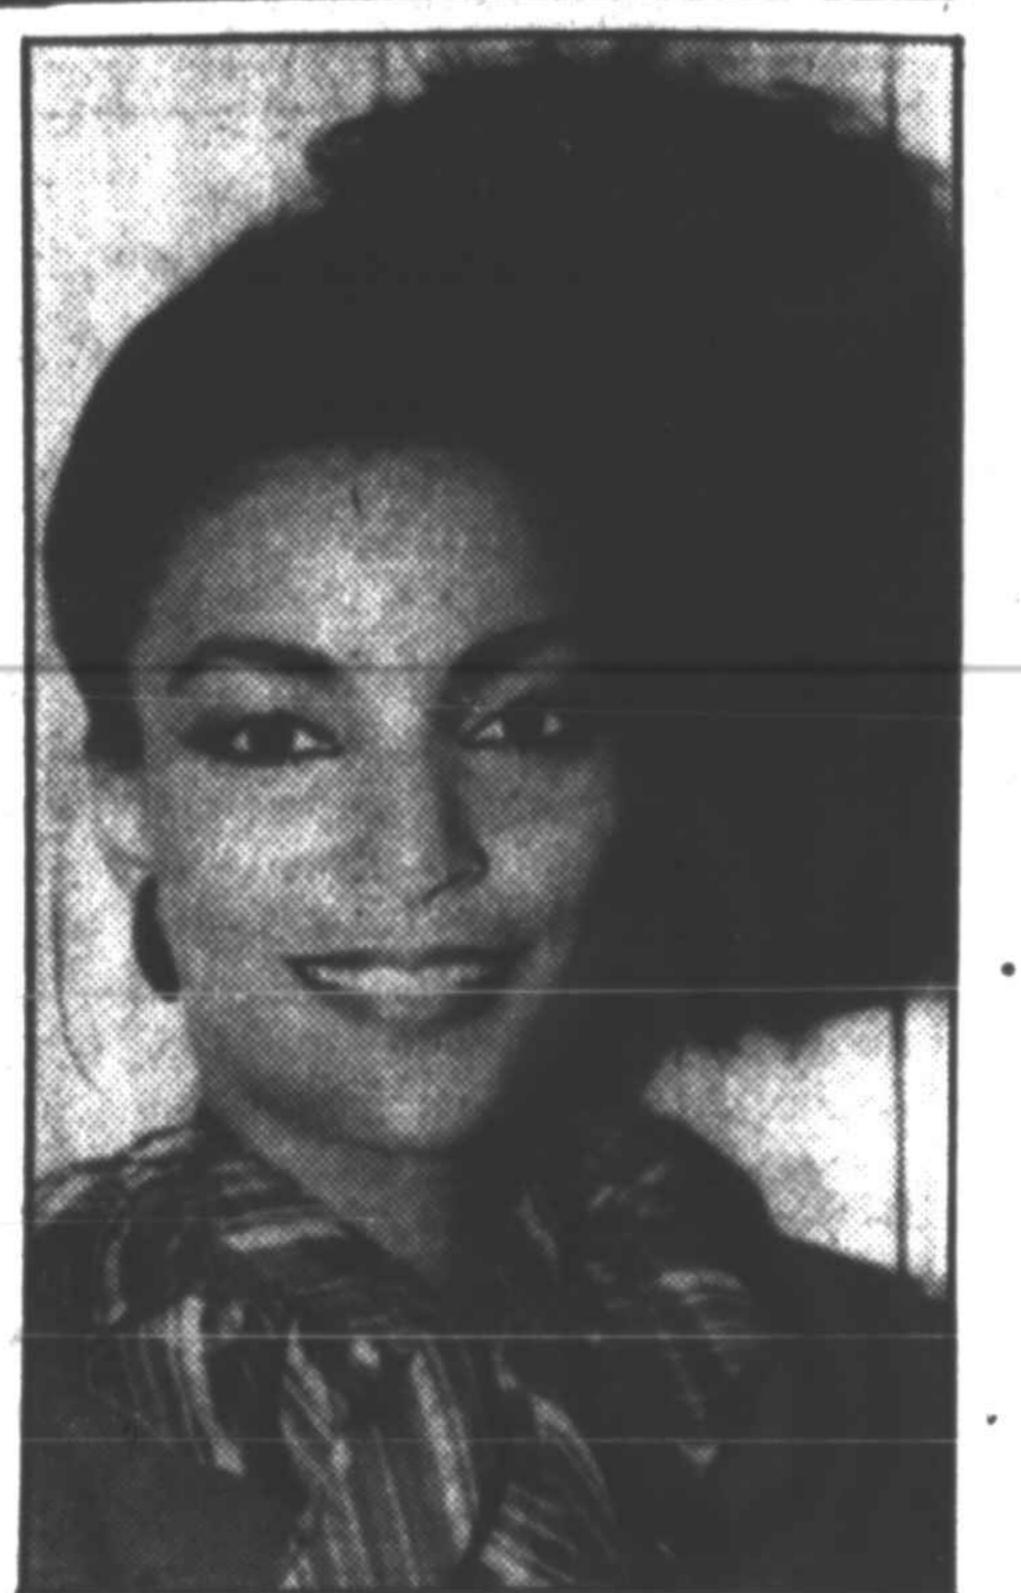

Henry's just thrilled about the opportunities that lie ahead for her, and she's raring to go! And whether she decides to be a model, or uses her education to become a television anchorwoman, one thing is clear: Edwina Richard has an exciting, glamorous, action-filled year ahead, with the promise of an equally
