"jelly beans and pen-pals", but about the country's future.

At one point, having acknowledged the public displays of affection, the evening sky blanketed with red, white and blue Mondale-Ferraro campaign posters, the former vice president answered the spectators saying, "You've got him," when the shrilled voices beckoned him to the outdoor podium.

He told the sea of mostly white faces, with several hundred blacks scattered in the crowd, to disregard the national polls and "slick magazines" that have already spelled doom for the Democratic Party next Tuesday.

Polls have the Mondale-Ferraro ticket trailing the Reagan-Bush ticket by as many as 12 points.

"These pollsters...are telling you that the election is over and your vote doesn't mean anything, but I've got something to tell you...polls don't vote...people do."

Mondale sprinkled humor throughout his speech. He seemed to be elated that Halloween afforded him yet another opportunity to paint his opponent as little more than a Hollywood actor in costume.

Taking up the Halloween theme he said of the Republicans, "When they come to your door and holler trick or treat, they'll be talking about the Republican tax package. It will be treats for the rich and tricks for everybody else."

Much of the Mondale visit was devoted to making swipes at the White House, however, he used the Inner Harbor visit as an opportunity to praise his voting record on federally funded urban renewal projects while a U.S. Senator from Minnesota.

"Come to Baltimore and see what can be done when a president is committed to cities. Twenty-five years ago you'd come to Baltimore and see a city going down hill. But now...the world comes to Baltimore."

Pleading with local voters to stand tall for democracy and freedom in South Africa, Central America, the Philippines and Poland, he castigated the Republicans for their stand on the issue of human rights abroad.

"Daily we pick up the paper and read about people starving in Africa and Ethiopia...yet we pay millions of dollars to people in this country not to grow food," he said.

her offices and was presumed to be black, telling the group of staff writers and editors at the local daily that the caller said, "Hey, man, got any jobs?"

It was that portrayal of blacks as only half-heartedly seeking employment that cost her the paper's endorsement.

Another local daily, The Sun-papers, which has backed Holt's election bid for a seventh-term, faces possible retaliation from several community and union groups who plan to stage a formal protest outside the publication beginning today (Friday) at 2 p.m.

The groups hope to force the paper to withdraw the Holt endorsement in the wake of this latest controversy.

Responding quickly to the outpouring of complaints, Mrs. Holt gave the following exclusive statement to the AFRO through a press aide early on Thursday morning: "We were discussing the unemployment problem of inner city youths.

"I discussed the need for job training, the need to motivate young people to stay in school and reduce the drop-out rate, and the need to teach young people how to seek jobs," said the congresswoman who insisted that the News American editors would substantiate the topic of conversation exchanged at last week's endorsement meeting.

She went on to say that, "I also said that some young people are not seriously seeking employment and quoted testimony that I had heard at a hearing of the House Budget committee several years ago.

"That is the quote that has caused all the controversy. We were talking about how to motivate kids. I do not see any racism in all this," Mrs. Holt's statement concluded.

When asked about charges that the congresswoman has over the years made other derogatory remarks about blacks, the aide, Sally Gill, said, "Sometimes racism is in the eye of the beholder."

A source, who asked not to be identified, said the chief and most immediate problem there on the Morgan campus is to solidify the various communities comprising the "Morgan Family," so that a strong phalanx may be formed to march forward together in one step.

The biggest strike Dr. Richardson may have against him in the eyes of many is whether he has the intellectual, psychological, and politcal stamina to become "his own man and do what is best for Morgan beyond his previous connections," the source said.

The announcement was the end of a lengthy process which began on April 17, 1984 with the appointment by Board Chairman David F. Johnson of the following Presidential Search Committee members:

Rev. John R. Bryant, Regent, Mrs. Edna Campbell, Regent, Mr. Taiwo Chukwueke, Student, Dr. Leroy Durham, Faculty, Mrs. Wilhelmina Goff, Alumni, Mr. John Green, Regent & Chairman, Professor Cynthia Harvey, Faculty, and Ms. Phyllis McCutcheon, Staff.

Also Mrs. Enolia McMillan, Regent, Rev. Douglas I. Miles, Community, Ms. Wakeelah Mutazammil, Student, Mrs. Valarie Robinson, Staff, Edward Smith, Jr., Esquire, Community, Dorsey R. Thomas, Esquire, Alumni and Paul Walter, Esquire, Regent.

Although the committee was composed of 15 working members, only 9 members were responsible for forwarding recommendations to the Board of Regents.

The committee received and reviewed 72 applications for the position, which over a 5 month period were narrowed down to 10 semi - finalists who were interviewed. After the interview process, four (4) finalists were recommended to the Board of Regents for its consideration. These finalists were interviewed by the full Board on Tuesday, October 30, 1984 and the final choice was made.

Dr. Richardson, came to Morgan as the Interim President on February 15, 1984, following the resignation of Dr. Andrew Billingsley.

Prior to assuming his duties at Morgan, Dr. Richardson was the Assistant to the President for Central Administration at the University of Maryland, College Park. His other work experience involves various positions at the University of Maryland, Eastern Shore, the last position being Executive Assistant to the Chancellor.

Dr. Richardson, who earned his Masters and Doctoral degrees in Education Administration at the University of Pennsylvania, has been the recipient of several prestigious awards and honors including fellowships from both the Ford and Kellogg Foundations.

Some of his professional writings and publications include "HEW Guidelines: Implications for Maryland Black Higher Education," "Plight of the University of Maryland, Eastern Shore: To Exist, To Merge or To close," "Enhancing Interinstitutional Cooperation Between Traditionally Black Institutions and Predominantly White Institutions," and "Some Economic, Educational and Racial Implications of a Proposed Merger of the University of Maryland, Eastern Shore and Salisbury State College."

guaranteed service will be restored or remain on as long as certain payments are made.

Depending on income, a household must pay from 20 to 30 percent of each month's current bill. They must pay this each month, November through March.

According to agency calculations, this payment will mostly be between $33 and $65 per month.

Urban Service officials see the plan as a perfect opportunity for customers who have had service turned off, to have service restored before winter weather becomes severe.

Customers whose service has been turned off, can be turned back on without reconnection fee or additional security deposit, by paying a percentage of the back bill, a percentage that can be aided by some grant programs available; however, it is important that these customers sign up for the Winter Protection Plan.

Gas and Electric customers can apply for the plan at the same time they apply for the Maryland Energy Assistance Program.

Presently, there are some 5,000 city homes without gas or electricity due to shut-offs. Earlier in the year, protests came in large and small numbers to these service turn-offs as customers complained that no realistic way exists to pay the amount requested for back bills, as well as the current bills being received.

Under the Winter Protection Plan, all eligible applicants must be reconnected if they sign up for the plan and must be allowed to operate under all the rules and guidelines of the procedure.

It is after the winter season between November and March that customers must become concerned about paying back any balance.

All 32 intake centers for the Energy Assistance and the Weatherization Programs are signing up people for the plan. These include all Urban Services Neighborhood Centers and Mayor's Stations.

quors, Sammuel Miller, was somewhat disappointed. A 32-year employee of the store, he has always had a holiday on Election Day.

"I just work here. I used to have the day off, that day, Election Day, was my day," he said.

Miller felt that the law was changed because of the lottery. "The city was losing money because a lot of the package goods stores wouldn't open up just to sell lottery tickets. All these years that they wouldn't open up, the state was losing money."

Billy Gould, owner and operator of G & G Liquors and Patent Medicines, didn't like the repeal of the law for other reasons. He said, "Businesswise it will really be beautiful, but I don't go for it. Drinking and voting just doesn't feel right."
