THE NBA: DEAD END TO A DREAM?

By GREGORY D. CLAY

Though black college alumni fare well in football's professional ranks, they seem to be a dying breed in the National Basketball Association. Why?

25 A CLASSIC

By SAM DAVIS

Norfolk State survives Winston-Salem State literally by inches in a CIAA championship game full of drama and surprises.

THE CREAM OF THE BLACK COLLEGE CROP

Alcorn State is our pick as the nation's top black college basketball team — if you don't count Georgetown — which is about as surprising as the fact that Michael Jackson has lots of money.

BASKETBALL 1984-85

By SAM DAVIS and LONZA HARDY JR.

While the guard changes in the MEAC, things look to remain pretty much the same in the SWAC pent-
