Directed by Alan this special Sharpe, engagment will run January 25-27 for four performances only in one weekend at the Arena Playhouse.

One Monkey Don't Stop No Show, is a hilarious battle sexes, between chronicling the panic, confusion and hysteria arising when a middle-aged preacher, his bourgeoise wife and their preppy teenage son find themselves caught up in the sexual revolution; a situation further complicated when an unmarried niece from the country arrives and sets her sights on a cyncial, determinedly single nightclub owner who is a friend of her deceased father.

Along the way, Evans' dizzy valentine flirts with a number of heavy subjects in lighthearted way, including women's liberation, mid-life crises, growing pains, the black middle-class and male menopause.

Don't miss

what's happening with our favorite artists, but one almost slipped by me-almost, not actually.

You may or may not know it but Buck Hill is heading up a quartet playing at the King of France Tavern of the Maryland Inn in Annapolis, where they will be through Sunday night.

He opened Tuesday night, and you can bet we were right up front when he blew his first notes. Have to say at the outset that Buck continues to improve.

Must confess that we lost the notes we had carefully written on the appearance, but do know that this was the first time this particular back up rhythm section had played with Buck.

But, you never would know. Obviously, they had rehearsed prior to this gig, and things came together so smoothly, you'd have thought they had played together for years,

Guess the true test was playing some of the Buck Hill originals. which they did with aplomb, with Buck's tenor soaring into the lead and smoothing the way for the young musicians to follow.

Was chatting with Buck following the first set, and naturally, had to ask how he was making out as a retired person—he was supposed to leave the Post Office employ last year,

According to Buck-he won't be retiring any time soon, for it is really tough to make a living in music these days. As Buck put it:

NIGHT SCENE SEEN

"There are already a lot of starving musicians in New York." There is a happy side to this, however. What it all boils down to, is that Buck will remain in this area for a while—and hopefully, he will be gigging where we can get to hear him.

There will be almost a repeat of a very successful concert, featuring five artists who are in the mainstream of the highenergy sound of today.

It happens Saturday, Feb, 16 at the Meyerhoff and is being billed as the New York Jazz Festival, Featured will be Roy Ayers, Tom Browne, Lonnie Liston Smith, Noel Pointer and Jean

If memory serves me right, they appeared at the Lyric last year before a really enthusiastic crowd, so this is one to check out.

Oops, almost forgot to mention that the Wynton Marsalis concert scheduled for this Saturday, has been cancelled. Don't ask me why... I had planned to attend.

The Divine one, Sarah Vaughan is appearing through Sunday at Charlie's Georgetown over in D.C. Was wondering how a club the size of Charlie's could bring in an artist of the Vaughan stature—then we found out. There is a cover charge of $25, plus entertainment tax, and a two-drink minimum. And-we'll bet it will be packed. D.C. can and does support things of this While putting notes in your book for the future, just got word that Malachi Thompson will be appearing in one of the Smithsonian Resident Associates performances on Feb. 22.

Featured with him will be tenor saxist Carter Jefferson, and the whole thing will take place at the Albert Einstein Planetarium in the Air and Space Museum in Hate to keep harping on a same theme, but can't help but wonder when our favorite organization, the Left Bank Jazz Society, is going to make an announcement. O.K. LBJS, the time has come—we're all waiting.

TR[VIA QUESTION: What is Buck Hill's real first name? Answer: Roger.
