Caucus leadership in question

Can Young bounce back?

By Alicia Benjamin
AFRO Staff Writer

A new chairman of the Maryland Legislative Black Caucus will be elected Friday and it looks as if Sen. Larry Young's (D-39) chances of winning may have been slashed.

Young recently has claimed that he was abducted from his McCulloh Street home but according to police, Young claimed he was kidnapped in an attempt to cover up an assault he committed against his former aide.

On June 2, Young was involved in a scuffle, with his former assistant, picked up a piece of wood and injured the aides' arm, according to sources.

Later that day, Young called police and claimed he was forced into a van, driven around Druid Hill Park and released, police said.

Young's case has been turned over to state's attorney Stuart O. Simms, who will decide whether to charge Young with filing a false report.

Del. Tony Fulton (D-40) has said that Black caucus members have divulged information about Young to the

Boyce-Beys tell tale of racist terror

By Alisa Samuels
AFRO Staff Writer

The Moorish family that moved into Hampden in May announced yesterday it plans to soon move into a Moorish community in Northeast Baltimore where it can feel comfortable and safe.

"I need to know they're safe," said Eric Boyce-Bey of his family during the 11 a.m. press conference outside their 3018 Keswick Ave. home.

"It never occurred to us that this kind of thing was going on in Baltimore," Boyce-Bey said with his wife Carolyn, at his side.

The Moorish family's home, with an American and Moroccan flag in the front windows, has been the target of racism. Their windows have been broken and their lives were threatened.

Police was called in to guard the family, until it moves. But the Boyce-Beys are opposed to the protection.

Boyce-Bey, 23, said "I don't care for police protection, but police felt it was necessary. It's better to be safe than sorry."

Although Boyce-Bey did not say how soon they would move, they are expected to stay at the Keswick address until the move comes.

Some of their white neighbors stood in their doorways and sat on their steps while the press conference took place.

Some people yelled insults from their car windows as they passed the Moorish family's home.

One white neighbor told a reporter covering the press conference, "Don't look in my house n . . . r," as he got out of his car.

"It was not our intent to integrate what has historically been an all European neighborhood," Boyce Bey said. ". . . It has been said that our leaving Hampden would be a loss, but we did not move here to wage a battle, therefore it should not be viewed as such by anyone."

City housing inspectors determined the Boyce-Beys' home was not in compliance to all housing code standards, which Boyce-Bey gave as another reason for their leaving.

The city has been very helpful in finding them another home, Boyce-Bey said.

But he criticized the mayor for not playing a more active role in their situation.

"Mayor Schmoke is a 'Bey' and when he realizes that he will be able to fully understand his role" Boyce-Bey said.

Boyce-Bey and his family appeared to be emotionless during the press conference. "I have mixed feelings,"

Night of love ends in murder conviction

By Ejike Obineme
AFRO Staff Writer

Assistant State's Attorney Laura Mullaly argued recently that on October 30, 1987, Lawrence Leggett, 38, of the 700 block of Lennox St. picked up Vanita Stepter of the 2200 block of Madison Ave., made love to her and when something went wrong, he killed her and dumped her body in the stairway of his apartment.

Public defender Bridget Shepherd argued that either the investigators were incompetent, or they deliberately forgot to do a complete analysis of the evidence they got. She said, "The State has a wonderful case of maybe, if, and possibilities . . . possible, possible, possible is not beyond reasonable doubt."

The jury of 10 blacks and 2 whites listened to all the closing arguments Friday in a Baltimore City Circuit Court. They deliberated for almost four hours before finding Leggett guilty of first degree murder and use of a deadly weapon.

Judge Arrie Davies set sentencing for July 25, and Leggett is eligible for a mandatory sentence, which means that he can get 25 years in prison without parole.

The trial revealed that on the day the incident occurred, Stepter went to visit friends. She was later found dead in the stairway of a Lennox Street Apartment with four stab wounds, three to the chest, and one to the wrist. The police was investigating the incident when Leggett who lived in Apartment A came in.

Police saw what looked like blood on Leggett's face and

Hunter ready to lead city schools

By Jill P. Carter
AFRO Staff Writer

Richard C. Hunter, the selection committee's top-ranking candidate in the city's school superintendent post, is also the highest ranking candidate in the eyes of Mayor Kurt L. Schmoke, according to sources.

Confident and poised, Hunter met with the press after about two hours of interviews with members of the school board, community organizations, the mayor, and concerned civic leaders in a conference room in GBC headquarters, at Legg Mason Tower.

Hunter, who was also a finalist in the 1982 superintendent search, said he is impressed with the Board of Education in Baltimore, and their understanding of educational issues and desires to improve the school system.

"There has been reported that Hunter was not chosen before as a result of his lack of enthusiasm during an interview.

But Hunter believes his attitude may have been reflective of the lack of enthusiasm exhibited by those who interviewed him about the school system.

Though Hunter may be the number one slot, there is concern over his intentions to stay in the city once selected.

In 1985, nine months after accepting a five-year contractural position as superintendent in Dayton, OH, he broke the contract to accept a tenured position as professor at University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Hunter explains his sudden departure from Dayton as a good opportunity that may have come at the wrong time.

He describes the UNC offer as "a step up for blacks," sighting that few blacks in the country are offered full professorships at major institutions.

He hopes to have opened the door for blacks, without having closed the door on his chance to once again become an urban school superintendent.

"It is unfortunate that it may stand in the way of my leading a public school system because children will be the ones to suffer if I have the leadership potential as made evident in Richmond and in Dayton," Hunter said.

He believes the Dayton incident may have knocked him out of the superintendent posts he recently applied for in Washington and Birmingham, AL.

Hunter was school superintendent in Richmond for eight years and nine months before moving to Dayton.

Under his administration, test scores raised, while the drop-out rate declined. School administrators there remember him as a committed superintendent who implemented innovative programs, created and developed Early Childhood Education, and motivated students to strive for excellence.

More than twenty years of educating, administrating and teaching administrators has cultivated in the man an

Street Academy sets graduation events

Retiring Senior Teacher Walter G. Griffith will be the commencement speaker at the Ninth Annual Graduation of the Park Heights Street Academy, June 26, at Malcolm X Elementary School, 2810 Shirley Avenue at 3 p.m.

The college prep school is expected to have approximately 12 graduates, one of the largest classes in the school's relatively brief history.

Founded 10 years ago in a partnership between the people of Park Heights and the City, as a way of stabilizing the community, and creating a high quality educational institution which area youth could utilize as a means of personal advancement, the school's reputation has spread beyond the bounds of the City.

Its unique family atmosphere, its faculty-student ratio, its emphasis on academics and practical preparation for life, all have served to firmly stabilize the institution as a mecca for highly motivated students seeking a unique personalized educational environment.

The retirement of Walter George Griffith, the school's very first teacher, is both a sad and happy occasion. It signals the end of the beginning, but the beginning of the future for the institution Grif-
