Editor's Message

This month Dawn takes a look at working women in both the corporate and the blue collar realms. While the work certainly varies, the problems in both worlds can overlap. Making the right moves to get and stay ahead are vital.

Patricia Tatum

Before we end this message to our readers, we also would like to take time out to note some special days falling in the Month of May. Mothers Day falls on May 14. Where would we be without our mothers. If your mother is still living, maybe it would be a good idea to not only honor her on that day but many other days as well.

It also can be a time of reflection about some of the good times shared with your mother if she no longer is able to share the day with you.

Another important day in May will be observed on the 29th, Memorial Day. As a child, growing up in Southern California, Memorial Day always meant a trip to the cemetery to lay flowers on the graves of departed loved ones. It also was a family day when our large clan would gather and barbecue in someone's back yard.

May can be an exciting, alive month of spring. We should remember and appreciate what we have, cast an eye on the future and take some moments to reflect on the past.
