emerged with "Kenny G," an LP that established him among the most promising young instrumentalists in the country. It made the top 10 on Billboard's jazz chart, and received considerable pop, R&B and adult-contemporary airplay as well.

When it came time to record the follow-up album, Kenny typically decided to take an alternative route, to go more in the R&B-influenced direction that had always been his musical passion.

Backstage at a concert in New York City, Kenny was introduced to Kashif. "I didn't know who he was," Kenny admits, although Kashif had already built up a string of hits as a writer-producer for such artists as Evelyn King and

Howard Johnson. Kashif was working on his own LP for Arista, and asked Kenny to play sax on the track "Say Something Love."

"I had more fun recording the solo that afternoon than doing my first album," Kenny said later. He then asked Kashif to write a couple of songs for his upcoming album, and the two hit it off so well that Kashif wound up executive-producing all of "G-Force." The album, recorded in New York, spawned the hit

The partnership, based on a strong mutuality of musical tastes, proved creatively compatible, and led to the album "Gravity," the first album to be wholly recorded at Kashif's home studio, New Music Group Studio. The LP, produced by Kashif, Kenny, and Wayne Braithwaite, featured Kenny not only on soprano and alto sax, flute, and syn-

As Kenny says, this specially-designed update of the lyricon "takes the instrument to a higher level," with the ability to sound uncannily like an acoustic or electric

On "Esther" from the new LP, Kenny uses a Digital Wind Controller to play the role of a violin section. The use of such groundbreaking in struments is indicative of Kenny's eagerness to continue expanding the technological approaches to his sound.

"If I had to label my music," Kenny G has said, "I'd call it contemporary R&B/pop with a strong instrumental base. I've always been into R&B; that's where my heart lies." On Duotones, Kenny blows up a blue storm, and continues to make some of the most appealing — if unclassifiable music around.

"Maniquin" contains eight tracks recorded with some of the nation's top producers, engineers, and studio support personnel. The premier single from the LP is the funk-rocking "I Wanna Ride." This tune was co-written and produced for the group by Ronnie and Charlie Wilson of The Gap

Another track is "Take Care," written and produced by Ernesto Phillips of Elektra recording group Starpoint. That group's lead singer Renee Diggs turns in a typically enchanting vocal performance on this cut in conjunction with Maniquin's Just "Ray."

The ballad "Now And Then" spotlights Kenny Lattimore, who co-wrote the song with we all grew up listening to and Brian Stanley; the cut was produced by Epic labelmate Charlie Singleton.
