

Did your husband give you any money to pay the installments?

Yes.

Did you when you first went to housekeeping buy some of this furniture on the instalment plan?

We bought the furniture and paid for it when we first went to housekeeping.

What did you add to that that you didn't have?

We didn't add so much.

Didn't you have two bed room suites at that time?

No, only about a year afterward we got our other bed room suite.

You set up in your answer that you had money in the Hagerstown Bank that went broke, what bank was that?

First National.

How much was that?

Not so much, about $270.00.

You and your husband made an effort to settle your interest in this property once, didn't you?

Yes, he rather did.

How much did you want to sell out your half?

I can't recall whether I made an estimate or not. I can't remember.

Didn't you want as much as $2,000 for your half undivided interest since your divorce?

Maybe I did.

Did you, in return, offer to give him only $500.00 or $600.00 for his one-half undivided interest?

I never made him an offer. He made me an offer. He offered me $750.00.

First he offered me a thousand dollars, then seven hundred fifty, and I told Mr. Harp that I would give him $750.00 for his share if he wanted to give me $750.00 for mine.

Did you want, as stated before, about $2,000.00 for your one-half interest?

I don't know, I can't remember.

This property cannot be divided in kind between you and your husband?

No.

The only way, unless you would settle between yourselves, would be to have it sold by a decree of the Court and divide the money?

That is the only way, unless we can agree.

Redirect examination by Mr. Harp.

I understood you to testify in cross examination that your husband gave you what personal property was in the house, is that true?

He did.

Re-cross examination by Mr. Buckey.

As a matter of fact, your husband's money bought most of this furniture when he first went to housekeeping?

What we had when we first went to housekeeping.

He said that it was a present for the wife, and he didn't contemplate that you were going to have this unhappy separation?

I didn't myself.
