

much.

Q What is mother's condition to your observation?

A At the present time when this property was sold we got - we were trying to get mother to sign it. We found her condition was so we couldn 't make her understand what we wanted her to do, or anything else; so we drew up papers and went there and asked her to sign her name. She said "I can't write and I can't do it."

Q And then you found that the doctors found she was physically incompetent?

A That's right, and since that time on - we have known it for the last two or three years - it is an awful thing to say - but when we would go there she didn't know us, and I would say, "Mamma." She would say, "I am not your mamma," things of that type. And she is getting the best of care and everything else. We are doing everything we possibly can.

Q Do you think this contemplated sale is a good thing for father and mother?

A It is the only thing to do, not that he will have anything left. At least he will pay off what is due the different people and everything. I mean as far as the amount he will have left when that sale is over is nothing. He hasn't had anything in the last three years. It has cost me a little, which is neither here nor there - I have been footing all the bills.
