

Q Which brother is that?

A Clarence Valentine, my oldest brother.

Q The one just testified?

A No, the one with glasses on. That's the way the thing was left. They didn't come back to us. My brothers went to my sister, but it wasn't on this farm. They argued with her, but it wasn't on this farm, and they had this appointment. We agreed to meet with Mr. Tebbs on this thing. Before we turned around this notice or summons was served. After the summons was served it was no use to go.

Q Had you ever seen Mr. Tebbs up to that time?

A No, sir, never met the man till today.

Q Right after you had been in Mr. Glass' office?

A I never seen the man.

Q How long was it from when you were in Mr. Glass' office till the time the summons was served?

A It wasn't served till the following week.

Q You were in Mr. Glass' office one day.

A Me and my wife. And my wife was there while he read it. I told him - I said, "Mr. Glass, you weren't representing us," he didn't have any right to send that stuff to us. It was on this paper 10%, they wanted me to sign it. Their names were on - not their handwriting - typewritten on it, but their original names weren't on it. That's all this whole thing started over. If they had come to us we would have agreed to sell, because you couldn't hold a farm with eight children in it. As far as holding it three years, that is an untruth, and my brother kept - after this thing started it came through Mr. Glass and Mr. Tebbs. So I wouldn't sign for 10%. I did tell Mr. Glass I am willing to sign that if my brothers wanted to pay 10% to sell the farm, I won't hold out, if they agree to that."
