

THE COURT: Who was appointed; who was the executor of the will?

EDGAR VALENTINE: We two.

THE COURT: The two of you were executors? You mean Edgar-Valentine, Jr., is that correct?

EDGAR VALENTINE: Yes.

THE COURT: And you are Agnes Zimmerman?

AGNES ZIMMERMAN: Yes.

THE COURT: Are you a daughter?

AGNES ZIMMERMAN: I am a daughter.

THE COURT: And you and your brother went to see Mr. Glass about settling your father's estate, is that correct?

AGNES ZIMMERMAN: Yes.

THE COURT: And then it was during that time that this paper was presented to you and your brother concerning the sale of this farm?

AGNES ZIMMERMAN: Sir, it was presented to my brother. I have never seen that paper.

THE COURT: You have never seen the paper?

AGNES ZIMMERMAN: No, I didn't see it.

EDGAR VALENTINE: He called me and my sister.

THE COURT: Did Mr. Glass ever call you to his office about the sale of the farm?

AGNES ZIMMERMAN: Not till after the summons went out.

THE COURT: After you received the summons then you were requested to come to his office?

AGNES ZIMMERMAN: That's right. It was before the summons! It was before the summons.

THE COURT: Before the summons?

AGNES ZIMMERMAN: Yes.

THE COURT: How long; do you know?
