

Q Mrs. Proctor, are you the mother of Ignatius Proctor?

A Yes.

Q And you are a defendant in this case, aren't you?

A Yes, sir.

Q What was the name of your late husband, Mrs. Proctor?

A James Franklin Proctor.

Q Now are you familiar with the terms of your father-in-law's will: William Joseph Proctor?

A Well, no, not exactly.

Q Let me ask you this: do you know whether your father-in-law left your husband any property?

A Yes, sir, he did.

Q Do you know whether your husband ever took possession of that property?

A No, sir, not any there to give him. Before he was married and before either one of them died, and we built on that property and we had it run out.

Q That property that you built on is not the property we are concerned with, is it?

A No, sir.

Q And so far as your husband's ten acres of land, he never marked off or located it?

A No, sir.

Q Do you know whether the interests of the other children in this tract of land were ever marked off or located?

A No, nobody's was ever marked off.

Q Now, Mrs. Proctor, the house you spoke about building, that was given your husband by his parents?

A Yes.

Q Was that located near this 50 acres of land we are talking about?

A Well, it was all you might as well say joining.

Q Are you familiar with this property we are talking about?

A Yes, sir.
