

House of Lords
Journal. ance betwixt the King and the Parliam^{te}, but Cornwallis to expresse his affecōn to the Parliam^{te} found meanes to free Ingle, and to restore him to his Shipp and all his goodes againe, for w^{ch} fact Cornwallis was fyned by the then Gouverno^r there att 1000^{li} of Tobaccoe (the highest fine that could be sett by the Lawe of the Country) and was compelled to pay the same And then for the safetie of his person was fayne to trust his estate wth a Servant, and to flie hither himselfe wth Ingle.

Afterwards Ingle goeing to those parts againe Cornwallis sent ouer some Comōdities by him for the maintenance of his plantaōn to the value of about 200^{li} but Ingle kept all the Comōdities, and takeing advantage of Cornwallis his absence, landed some men neere his house, and rifled him to the value of 2500^{li} att the least.

Ingle returning into England, Cornwallis brings 2 seuerall accōns att Law agst him one for the goodes delu^{ed} here, and another for the goods taken away in MaryLand, To stay w^{ch} pceedings, Ingle caused Cornwallis to be laid in prison vpon 2 fayned Accōns the one att Ingles owne suite for 5000^{li} the other att the suite of one Cloberry for 10000^{li} but Cornwallis by the helpe of his friendes gott out of prison. And now Ingle hath p^rferrd one peticōn in his owne name, and caused another to be p^rferrd in the name of one Mary ffoord agst the said Cornwallis before the Lordes in Parliam^{te} And vpon diuerse false Allegacōns hath p^cured an Order thence to stay Cornwallis his pceedings att Law, till the matter conteyned in those 2 peticōns be heard.

Seuerall days haue been appointed for heareing the businesse but through the multiplicity of other businesse the Lords could not intend itt And now Tuesday the 17th of this instant March is the day appointed

Wherefore Cornwallis humblie prayeth that the said businesse may be heard or dismissed, he beinge not able to mainteyne the charge of Attendance wth his Councill.
