

Liber R. salutations passed betweene them) asked the Deponent how he did, and told him he was glad to see him, wondred he had not seene him at his house at the Store, but at length Cap^t ffendall asked him what news? To which the Deponent replied he lived in the forrest, where they had little or noe news stirring. Cap^t ffendall then said what doe you heare noe news of the Indians, and of the Papists joineing with the Sinniquo Indians? and asked the Deponent whither he had not heard of a tract of two Indians then lately seene in the Snow? whereunto the Deponent professed himself a Stranger. Cap^t ffendall then further said there was a Report of the Papists joyneing with the Indians, & questioned much what should be the meaneing of that Tract; Doe you not heare said ffendall what my Lord has done? whereto the Deponent said noe, pray what is it said ffendall you are sensible of the trouble I
 p. 285 have had and been forced to flye my house, but since have recd: a note from my Lord to returne again or to that effect, pulling the note out of his pockett, and shewed the Deponent, also saying that soe soone as my Lord knew that he was come to his house, he sent a party of men to apprehend him, and further the said ffendall said now was the time, and if there were but four or five of them made sure, (naming my Lord the Chancelo^r the Secry, Coll Darnall, and he did not know what Esq^r Talbott was—but they fell again to discourse of the Indians and the Deponent asked the said ffendall what was his Opinion, to which he answered that he could not tell unless the Papists and Indians should confederate together. But the Deponent concluded the discourse telling him Cap^t ffendall this is plain Rebellion and soe parted.
